States

Big Dig dispute: The Big Dig's top manager said Saturday that a top consultant was fired from the Boston project over a possible conflict of interest, contradicting the man's claim that he resigned because he was stonewalled and can't vouch for the safety of the tunnels. Massachusetts Turnpike Authority Chairman Matthew Amorello rejected allegations by George Tamaro, an internationally renowned engineer, that Big Dig managers denied him access to crucial information about the repair work done to leaky I-93 tunnels.

Former Conn. governor: Former Connecticut Gov. John Rowland's supporters predict he will rebound from his corruption conviction, make use of old contacts in Washington, find work as a consultant and possibly resume his efforts to help the state's cities.

But Rowland's critics and some of his old political colleagues say he faces an uncertain future as a convicted felon and disgraced former public official since being sentenced to prison Friday.

"My guess is that it's going to be very difficult for him after this. I think this is a stain he will have to bear for a long time. I don't think people will forget it very quickly," said Republican Senate Minority Leader Louis DeLuca.

World

Kyrgyzstan protest: Thousands of protesters demanding the resignation of Kyrgyzstan President Askar Akayev rampaged through a southern city Sunday amid growing anger over allegedly fraudulent elections in the former Soviet republic.

The government said it was ready to negotiate, but opposition leader Kurmanbek Bakiyev said talks would be possible only if the president himself is involved.

Securing the euro: European Union finance ministers met Sunday in Brussels, Belgium, to amend rules for securing a stable euro, debating ideas that go far in meeting German and French demands for return to spend their way out of economic downturns.

Negotiations to reform the euro's "stability and Growth Pact" — while retaining its key requirement that a euro-zone nation's annual budget deficit cannot exceed 3 percent of gross domestic product — have been deadlocked for months. The lack of consensus was clear from the start of Sunday's meeting.

West Bank handover: Israel's defense minister said Sunday that Israel will soon hand over a second West Bank town to Palestinian control, pushing forward with peace efforts despite new violence that dealt a new challenge to a recent cease-fire.

Commanders from the two sides planned to meet later Sunday to finalize the transfer of Tulikarem to Palestinian forces. Defense

Lunsford kidnapping: John Evander Cooney makes his first appearance Sunday at the Citrus County Detention Facility in Lecanto, Fla. Authorities say Cooney has confessed to the abduction and murder of 9-year-old Jessica Lunsford. Cooney was booked early Sunday on a probation violation and failure to register as a sex offender, according to officials. He has not officially been charged in Lunsford's death, although that move was expected soon.

Minister Shaul Mofaz said the handover would take place on Monday, days after Israel withdrew its troops from Jericho.

U.N. war crimes trial: A senior Bosnian Serb general indicted for genocide in the 1995 massacre of some 8,000 Muslim men and boys in Srebrenica is to surrender to the U.N. war crimes tribunal, the Serbian government said Sunday.

Vinko Pandurevic, a top fugitive since the end of the 1992-95 war in neighboring Bosnia, was to travel to the Netherlands on Wednesday to give himself up to the U.N. court at The Hague, the government said in a statement.

Possible violation of Mideast pact: An extensive aerial photography operation carried out for Israel's Defense Ministry has revealed considerable new building in Jewish settlements in the West Bank, an Israeli newspaper reported Sunday, an apparent violation of Israeli obligations under a U.S.-backed Middle East peace plan.

Expansion of Israeli settlements runs counter to the "road map" peace plan, which calls for a complete freeze on settlement construction, including that resulting from natural population growth. The Haaretz newspaper said the photography operation, completed in recent weeks, included all the Israeli settlements and authorized settlement outposts in the West Bank.

Lebanon turmoil: Lebanese President Emile Lahoud will not bow to pressure from the anti-Syrian opposition to resign, a senior aide said Sunday, insisting that the leader still had parliament's confidence and would not leave a power vacuum.

The remarks by Rafik Shalala, Lahoud's media adviser, come amid a deepening political crisis in Lebanon since the Feb. 14 assassination of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri.

Shalala stressed that the president can be forced to step down only if he is impeached by Parliament for either violation of the constitution or high treason.

Italy railway strike: Italian railway workers pressing for improved safety measure have called an eight-hour strike for Monday, but most long-distance trains will make their runs, according to state railways.

The strike originally had been scheduled to last for 24 hours, but after appeals from authorities to reduce the impact on travelers at the start of a holiday week, the stoppage was reduced to eight hours, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Protests in Pakistan: About 35,000 supporters of a religious alliance rallied in Karachi, Pakistan, on Sunday, many chanting slogans against President Gen. Pervez Musharraf and the United States.

"Death to Musharraf, death to America," chanted participants of the rally organized by a six-party coalition of radical Islamic groups on a busy road in Karachi.

The alliance, which demands Musharraf step down as the army chief, made unexpected gains in parliamentary elections in 2002 mainly on a platform of opposition to the army general and the U.S. war against terrorism that ousted the Taliban militia from power in Afghanistan in late 2001.

Army Secretary Francis J. Harvey speaks with Sgt. Jacque Ballay, a Louisiana National Guard member who was injured in Iraq. Ballay lost his left eye in the combat zone.

Harvey: Army to pull out all stops to boost force

Army secretary discusses recruiting, reshaping the service as he wraps up overseas tour at Landstuhl

BY SCOTT SCHONAUER

Stars and Stripes

LANDSTUHL, Germany — After falling short of its recruiting goal, the Army will “pull all the stops out” to sign up more troops, the service’s top civilian leader said.

The Army is offering more incentives and boosting the number of recruiters by one-third to entice men and women to join the active-duty Army, National Guard and Reserve, Army Secretary Francis J. Harvey said on Saturday.

The service missed its recruiting mark by more than 27 percent February. It is the first time in nearly five years the regular Army fell short of its monthly goal.

“We’re going to do some out-of-the-box thinking,” Harvey told Stars and Stripes. “But I’m concerned. I’m kind of cautiously optimistic in the (active-duty) and very concerned about the (National Guard). But we’re not going to give up.”

The secretary talked about recruiting and various other issues after meeting with wounded soldiers at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany. He visited the hospital after wrapping up an eight-day trip overseas that also took him to Iraq and Afghanistan.

Recruiting has become a top priority for the Army as it tries to bring in 80,000 new soldiers — 3,000 more recruits than last year — by the end of this fiscal year in September.

Signing up more troops will largely fall on recruiters, who must convince men and women to join even though violence in Iraq has claimed more than 1,500 American lives.

They will have some help. The number of recruiters will rise from 9,000 to 12,000 in the field, Harvey said. The Army also will offer higher enlistment bonuses to new recruits.

Although the war in Iraq has hurt recruiting, Harvey noted that retention in the ranks is high.

“The retention is a good story and that’s important because it’s end strength that counts,” he said. “It’s a combination of recruiting and retention.”

The Army’s efforts to reshape its forces to better fight future wars and conflicts will help keep soldiers from leaving, Harvey added. In the near future, soldiers should have a better idea when they will deploy.

Under current plans, active-duty units would be deployed one year and stay home for two years before deploying again. National Guard troops would be deployed for a year and then not deploy for five, while Reserve soldiers would deploy for one year and then stay home for at least four years.

“We’re migrating to that and it’s intense right now,” he said. “But that will relieve the stress on the force and the intention is to do that in the next few years.”

Soldiers also will stay at bases longer. Many troops and their families move from base to base every two to three years.

“So we can say to a family you’ll be at a certain base for seven years,” Harvey said. “You can plan on that. It’s predictable.”

The kids will be in school and you can be a member of the local community.”

The predictability of deployments and longer tours at a home base will also help recruiting, he added, but the key to bringing in more soldiers is convincing Americans the importance of military service.

“We’ve got to emphasize the value of service. I mean, we the leaders, Congress, business people have got to say, ‘Serving the country is a noble thing to do. Preserving the peace and freedom of the country is a noble thing to do.’”

AAFES: Point-of-sale processing downgrade eases late-billing hassle

BY JESSICA INIGO
Stars and Stripes

DARMSTADT, Germany — Credit and debit card processing downgrade is literally miles ahead of where it was ear ago, according to Army and Air Force Exchange Service officials.

More than 90 percent of AAFES facilities have point-of-sale processing capabilities now, ending potentially long delays between purchase and account debits or charge card bills.

Grant Morris, the AAFES treasurer, said it used to take weeks or months for credit and debit card purchases to be processed with the old “good faith” method. The initial infrastructure only allowed AAFES officials to copy down card information and then take it to the nearest processing facility. In Iraq, that meant sending receipts to Kuwait. Receipts generated in Afghanistan were processed in Germany.

Now that most AAFES stores have point-of-sale capabilities, those at remote sites without a credit card swipe machine only have to go a few miles to the nearest location to process the sales.

Morris said this means funds for purchases are either collected at the time of purchase or days later, easing headaches for some troops who may have forgotten about past purchases.

In one of the more extreme cases, the Cravens family was surprised when $500 was deducted from their account more than a year after a purchase was made in Iraq.

It took awhile for Sgt. Rebecca Cravens’ husband to remember making a large purchase while deployed to Camp Muleskinner, Iraq, 13 months ago. Cravens wrote in an e-mail to Stars and Stripes.

Cravens only noticed the money taken out of their account when she was trying to balance her checkbook.

As a word of advice, Cravens suggests troops pay close attention to their account activity and always keep enough to pay for purchases — even if they were made months before.

“I felt I should warn others because I’ve seen how people spend their money after they return home,” Cravens wrote in the e-mail earlier this month. “If we had spent our savings from Iraq like we really wanted to we would have been in a lot of trouble.”

Morris said this incident is unusual and could have been a case of the receipt falling through the cracks for a while. Though he said he was sorry that it took so long to take the funds out, the money was still owed to AAFES.

“If there’s any issue like this again with a major delay, we will notify the customer in advance,” Morris said during a telephone interview from the United States on Tuesday.

He also noted that before there were credit card machines, AAFES kept signs up as reminders that it could take a while before purchases cleared.

Now, only the most remote sites have to worry about these delays in paying for AAFES merchandise.

However, that may change soon. Morris said AAFES is looking into getting satellite capabilities for these camps within the next year so bills can be processed immediately.

Former wrestling champ brings new techniques and intensity — and a team title — to Ramstein program

BY RUSTY BRYAN

Stars and Stripes

RAMSTEIN AIR BASE, Germany — When Gary Steffensmeier, a three-time NCAA Division I All-American wrestler at Northern Iowa University, offered to help coach Dave Izzo's Ramstein wrestling team, the effect on Izzo's program was more than just a breath of fresh air.

It was more like an Iowa tornado.

"After 28 years of coaching, the wind kind of goes out of your sails," Ramstein veteran Izzo said. "I brought a new intensity to the wrestling room."

That intensity was born of a passion for the sport Steffensmeier, the youngest of 13 children, developed while growing up in Fort Madison, Iowa. With seven older brothers, Steffensmeier wrestled all his life. Sometimes, he recalled, it felt like he was wrestling for his life.

"I never beat my oldest brother for the first 18 years of my life," Steffensmeier said, even though he was a two-time high school state champion.

From prep state champion, Steffensmeier went on to college wrestling. He completed his Northern Iowa career in 1992 with 115 victories, fifth on the all-time list at that wrestling hotbed, and a .793 winning percentage. He graduated to coaching berths at Illinois State University and for the Texas National Team, where he tutored seven All-Americans.

Then it was back to competition again, this time internationally, with Dan Gable's Hawkeye Wrestling Club in Iowa. He spent three years at the club before hanging up his singlet for good and settling down with his wife, Army Maj. Margi Tollion-Steffensmeier, and their three children.

And when Tollion-Steffensmeier was assigned to Pirmasens, Germany, all of her husband's wrestling fervor had to be channeled into volunteering with a wrestling team an ocean away from the big-time programs he knew.

Even so, he said, volunteer coaching is a channel wide enough to handle his love of the sport.

"Coaching's more fun in a lot of ways," Steffensmeier, who began at Ramstein High School as a substitute teacher before being hired full-time to teach algebra and math. "You get to watch them try to reach their goals. Coaching lets me be a positive influence in kids' lives."

That positive influence was evident last month at the European championships in Wiesbaden, Germany. Ramstein used many of Steffensmeier's techniques, qualifying four first-year wrestlers and winning the Division I team title.

"He showed us techniques for take-downs and setting up take-downs which were new to me," Izzo said. "I could see the improvement of our kids on their feet."

Steffensmeier said he tries to teach concepts as much as technique.

"We tell them, 'This is where you need to get to (to score),' " Steffensmeier said. "How you get there is up to you. Wrestling is an art. You paint the picture."

Steffensmeier makes sure, however, that the picture gets painted with a big dollop of Iowa-wrestling attitude.

"We stress that it's a fight out there for six minutes," Steffensmeier said. "We tell them, 'Don't stop. Don't get pinned. If you can fight for six minutes — for six entire minutes — you'll be tough to beat.'"

And not just on the mat. "Every day, we put kids in adverse situations, going up against someone they can't beat or battling fatigue," Steffensmeier said. "They learn to understand what sacrifice is, what hard work is. If they get taken down, if they lose, they know there's no one to blame but themselves. They learn to be better men."

Sale of Civil War cannon causing ruckus in village

BY BEN DOBBIN

The Associated Press

KENDALL, N.Y. — Driving down to the village on a weekend errand, Colin Zimmerman did a double-take as he drove past tiny Greenwood Cemetery: The $16-pound cannon that had adorned the graves of Civil War veterans for more than a century was gone.

"I just couldn't believe it," said Zimmerman, 45, a utility foreman. "I'm saying to myself, where the heck is it?"

The Union muzzleloader, forged in Pennsylvania in 1862, was quietly sold in December to the Civil War Artillery Museum near Pittsburgh and hauled away a few weeks ago. The five-member town board accepted a sweetened offer of $15,000, plus a replica cannon worth $5,000.

No one knows the war service of the 5-foot-long, 3-inch iron barrel, or exactly how it ended up in this western New York hamlet.

But its sudden absence has enraged a swelling army of protesters, many who think the town was duped into selling off a vital piece of its heritage.

The museum's broker, Bruce Stiles, has scoured the country for years seeking out Union and Confederate artillery pieces that are now collectibles valued from $20,000 to $200,000.

Thousands of obsolete cannons were given to veterans' groups, cemetery associations and municipalities in the half-century after the war ended in 1865. Fewer than 5,700 are known to have survived — many were melted down in scrap-metal drives during the world wars.

Issues of ownership and open government swirl around Kendall's fired-up debate: Was the cannon the town's to sell or might it belong to the federal government? Were the 2,800 residents in this farm country near Lake Ontario fairly informed of the intended leaders' intentions? "I could guarantee you that if you removed a veterans' item from the town, it might be the last election you ever won," said Michael Aikey, director of the New York State Military Museum in Saratoga Springs. "The federal government doesn't give things away. Most ordinance pieces in cemeteries and public areas are really on loan."

The government, however, sold many surplus arms to businesses that later resold them, muddying the ownership trail of undocumented cannons. John Kendall's, said artillery expert Wayne Stark, who maintains a "National Registry of Surviving Civil War Artillery."

"Every place is different," Stark said. "Some maintain the cannons, and I'd rather see them stay there, but so many signers who think the town was duped into selling off a vital piece of its heritage."

The snow-laden cemetery near Zimmerman's home, dotted with maples and pines, sits along a two-mile road on about five acres of land, half owned by Revolutionary War soldier. Around a concrete base where the cannon stood are the white marble grave-stones of Civil War veterans.

"Those men died for us," Zimmerman said with a trembling voice. "My dad was in the service and so was his dad, and there's kids dying right now, and I know so that I have the opportunity to voice my concerns."

Six killed in strikes on security forces

By SAMEER N. YACOB

The Associated Press

BAGHDAD — Insurgents targeted Iraqi and U.S. security forces with gunfire, suicide attacks and mortar rounds Sunday, killing six people — including a U.S. soldier and an Iraqi corruption official — as the conflict moved into its third year since the U.S.-led invasion.

Neighbors Iraq and Jordan withdrew their highest-level diplomats from each other's territory as tensions between the two countries increase over the alleged involvement of a Jordanian in a deadly suicide bomb attack in the city of Hillah.

Separately, a Jordanian court sentenced Iraq's most-wanted terrorist, Abu-Musab al-Zarqawi, in absentia to 15 years in prison.

A bomb exploded early Sunday near the northern city of Kirkuk, killing a U.S. soldier and wounding three others, the U.S. military said in a statement.

Elsewhere in northern Iraq, a suicide bomber blew himself up inside a government compound in Mosul, killing Walid Kashmoula, the head of the Iraqi police anti-corruption department, officials said. Three others were wounded.

Al-Zarqawi's al-Qaida in Iraq group purportedly claimed responsibility for the attack in a message posted on an Islamic Web site known for carrying statements from extremist militant groups.

People in Baghdad said saboteurs blew up a municipal building in a western neighborhood, reducing the two-story building to rubble.

A woman who lives nearby walks through the rubble of a local government building that was destroyed by a bomb that detonated overnight in the Saydiya section of Baghdad on Sunday.

A Humvee also was overturned on the highway to the airport. Witnesses said it was hit by a roadside bomb, but U.S. military officials were not available to comment.

Iraq's fledgling security force has been struggling to build its ranks and fight the lawlessness that has gripped the country in the two years since President Bush ordered the U.S.-led invasion on March 19, 2003.

Assaults leapt from their vehicle and unleashed gunfire on a policeman walking to work in Samarra, killing the man, said Maj. Soudou Ahmed, a police official in the Sunni Triangle town some 60 miles north of Baghdad.

The police who went to collect the man's body also came under attack, sparking a gunfight that left three police injured along with a trio of attackers, who were arrested, police Lt. Qassim Mohammed said.

In the southern city of Basra, attackers targeted a police patrol with a roadside bomb, killing one civilian and injuring a policeman, police Col. Karim al-Zeidi said. Insurgents also lobbed mortar fire into a neighborhood just outside the walls of an Iraqi army base in the town of Mahmudiya, south of Baghdad, killing one civilian and injuring two others.

Explaining the tit-for-tat diplomatic withdrawals, Foreign Minister Hoshiyar Zebari said Iraq's ambassador to Amman was being recalled for "consultations." Earlier, Jordan said it was doing the same to its highest official in Baghdad.

The decision followed a week of mounting anti-Jordanian sentiment after a newspaper reported that Jordanian Raed Mansour al-Banna carried out the bombing in Hillah, the single deadliest attack of Iraq's insurgency.

Also in Jordan, a military court sentenced al-Zarqawi, whose whereabouts are unknown, to 15 years in jail and a detained associate to three years behind bars Sunday for planning an attack on the Jordanian Embassy in Baghdad, the offices of the Jordanian military attaché in Baghdad and unspecified American targets in Iraq. Associated Press reporter Dale Gavlak contributed to this story from Amman, Jordan.

Accident injures 2 GIs

KUWAIT CITY — A vehicle accident has killed one Kuwaiti and injured two American soldiers, the U.S. military said in a statement Sunday.

Rumsfeld: Invading from north would have stung insurgents

By SIOBHAN McDONOUGH

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The level of insurgency in postwar Iraq wouldn't be so high if the U.S.-led coalition had been able to invade from the north, through Turkey, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said Sunday.

Rumsfeld told "Fox News Sunday" that if the United States had been able to get its 4th Infantry Division into northern Iraq through Turkey, the insurgency of Saddam's Baathist regime would have been captured or killed, diminishing the insurgency.

U.S. forces had to enter Iraq from the south, so by the time Baghdad was taken, much of Saddam's military and intelligence services had dissipated into the northern cities, Rumsfeld said.

"They're still, in a number of instances, still active," he said.

As Iraq security forces develop, Rumsfeld said, they will take increasing responsibility and the insurgency will diminish over time. He estimated current Iraqi security forces at more than 145,000.

U.S. forces in Iraq are being reduced from 153,000 to 137,000 or 140,000, Rumsfeld said, although it's possible more security will have to be put into place when new elections take place next year.

Rumsfeld told ABC's "This Week" that at least 30 projects are under way to reduce stress on U.S. forces. For example, he said, a new national security personnel system allows for the use of fewer military people in civilian positions, and the Pentagon is rebalancing the active force with the reserve component.

"So far, we've only used in Iraq and Afghanistan something like 40 percent of the Guard and Reserve," he said. "It's not like everything's been used up."

Gen. Richard B. Myers, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told NBC's "Meet the Press" that the all-volunteer force is "working marvelously."

On Fox, Rumsfeld defended his "old Europe" characterization of nations such as France and Germany that opposed U.S. policy in Iraq.

"I don't think it was a stunning comment, and it certainly wasn't in any way denigrating anything."

Military comes to aid in rainy Afghanistan

Troops launch rescue efforts as torrential rains spark flooding

BY KENT HARRIS
Stars and Stripes

BAGRAM AIR BASE, Afghanistan — To recent arrivals, it might seem as if there are only two types of weather in Afghanistan: rain and the brief periods between rain.

But the new millennium hadn't delivered much in the way of precipitation to Afghanistan until this winter. Then the snow came. Then, with the warmer weather came steady rain.

"Traditionally, the rain season doesn't stop until the first part of May," said Air Force Capt. Laura Maddin, the officer in charge of the weather detachment at Bagram Air Base.

The weather already has caused massive problems across the country. Servicemembers made dozens of humanitarian missions during the winter, dropping food to those cut off by snow or blocked roads.

Spring, which started Sunday, isn't off to a good start either.

An Associated Press report Sunday said more than 200 were missing after days of torrential rains have sparked floods. The confirmed death toll from flooding stood at 24. That's in spite of a rescue effort by U.S. forces on Friday that saved at least dozens — and perhaps hundreds — of residents trapped by rising waters in western Afghanistan.

Much of the country's soil is composed of clay and doesn't absorb water quickly.

During the recent dry years, many people have moved into areas susceptible to flooding. U.S. bases, except for some muddy bases, have generally fared well.

Bagram Air Base, at an elevation of about 4,900 feet, has recorded 2.79 inches of rain so far in March and 3.92 inches in February — 1½ inches above average, Maddin said. And, with 10 days left in March, the total was just short of the monthly average. Bases at lower elevations have reported no major problems.

"There are some bases which are technically in a flood plain," said Lt. Col. Kevin Kille, civil-military operations officer for Combined/Joint Task Force-76. "But we don't see any danger at this point."

Kille, a planner for the Delaware Emergency Management Agency in his civilian life, and a team of other military experts spend a good deal of time planning for the worst.

"Essentially, we monitor the conditions for flooding and respond to their effects," he said.

Kille estimates that U.S. forces conduct some kind of humanitarian assistance every day. A lot of it lately has to do with the weather. But he said coalition forces only get involved in disaster operations when the Afghan government and United Nations can't handle a situation.

U.S. aid often involves providing air lift or ground transportation. Coalition members also meet with Afghan government officials during their regular disaster planning meetings.

Kille, who has taught U.S. disaster relief methods in five foreign countries, said he'd like to do the same as Afghanistan.

Flooding and mudslides can pose another danger in a country rife with land mines. Weather might be able to put them in places once thought safe.

"That concern does exist," said Maj. Chris Donic, engineer planner for CJTF-76. "But I don't think it makes Afghanistan any more dangerous than it already is."

Donic said trying to figure out how many land mines might be shifted by flooding and mudslides is an impossible task. But he thinks it's likely that at least some have moved into areas once thought cleared.

"Four inches of water, if it's moving fast enough, will knock a person off his feet," he said. "So it'll certainly move a land mine."

Donic said there's also the possibility that mud could cover land mines that once could be easily seen — and avoided.

So while those on base mind their steps trying to avoid mud puddles, servicemembers throughout the country are told to always pay attention to their surroundings — whether it's raining or not.

Weather patterns are hard to track

BAGRAM AIR BASE, Afghanistan — How does recent precipitation — both snow and rain — compare with other periods in Afghan history?

Capt. Laura Maddin, the officer in charge of the Air Force weather detachment in Bagram, said it's hard to tell.

The Taliban compared meteorology with surgery and destroyed a lot of records when they were in power, she said.

Some records have been found in Kabul and the military is currently using those — adjusted somewhat for the lower altitude in Bagram — as a basis for historical averages.

Lt. Col. Kevin Kille, civil-military operations officer for CJTF-76, said countries in Southwest Asia historically suffer through five to seven years of drought every few decades.

Military officials also hear comments from local residents about the weather from time to time. "We've heard from some that when the Taliban left, they took the drought with them," Kille said.

Afghan parliamentary elections set

BY STEPHEN GRAHAM
The Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — The much-delayed parliamentary elections in Afghanistan will be held Sept. 18, election officials said Sunday, the next key step toward democracy after a quarter century of war.

Presidential and parliamentary elections were initially scheduled for June last year, but both were delayed because of the slow pace of preparations and efforts to disarm warlords and militia commanders who the United Nations' feared would intimidate voters.

The presidential elections were held in October, but the legislative ballot was postponed until May, and then again to September because of what President Hamid Karzai called "technical problems" and lack of an accurate census. On Sunday, election board chairman Bismillah Bismil gave the specific date for the vote.

After consulting the government and political parties, "we came to the decision to hold the polling on Sept. 18," the election commission said in a statement. "It will provide Afghans the opportunity to choose their representatives."

The much-delayed vote will select provincial councils as well as the lower house of parliament.

Parliamentary elections are supposed to complete a political process agreed in Bonn, Germany, after U.S. and allied Afghan forces drove out the Taliban in late 2001 for harboring al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden.

Afghanistan adopted a new constitution in January last year and elected Karzai president in the October ballot.

In a visit to Kabul this month, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said the United States would support Afghanistan as it prepares for the vote.

"We will stand by the Afghan people as they go through the next stage in their democratic development, the parliamentary elections that will take place this fall. We look forward to continuing to help in the reconstruction of Afghanistan," she said.

Afghanistan's population is an estimated 25 million, though there has been no reliable census since decades of war led to flight by millions. Many have returned since fall of Taliban. There are 10.5 million registered voters within Afghanistan, about 740,000 refugees in Pakistan, and 400,000-600,000 refugees in Iran. Just over 40 percent registered in Afghanistan are women.

A worker carries a wheelbarrow inside the main hall of the old Afghan Parliament that was heavily damaged during the civil war, and is now under reconstruction in Kabul, Afghanistan, on Sunday. Afghanistan will hold its delayed parliamentary elections on Sept. 18.

Dr. (Capt.) Matthew J. Carter, held Qais Abbas, better known as Abbasi, earlier this month. ## Anniversary of Iraq invasion brings out anti-war activists

BY SAM DOLNICK
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Anti-war activists marched in the streets of American cities big and small Saturday, stopping traffic and lying down alongside flag-draped cardboard coffins to mark the second anniversary of the start of the war in Iraq.

Some of the demonstrators were arrested in New York as they demanded that U.S. troops be brought home.

"This country was founded by acts of civil disobedience," said David McReynolds, 75, of New York, as he marched along 42nd Street. "We have an obligation to make our resistance public and to say as clearly as we can that the war is illegal."

In San Francisco, hundreds of protesters rallied in Dolores Park in the city's Mission district, holding up posters with photographs of dead American soldiers. The protesters then marched to City Hall for another rally.

One protester dressed up like the hooded Iraqi prisoner in the famous photo taken of detainee abuse at Baghdad's Abu Ghraib prison. The woman was surrounded by others wearing masks of President Bush, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, who were dancing to the song "Shout" by the Isley Brothers.

"This is a war of aggression," said Ed McManus, 54, a Vietnam War veteran. "Bush has admitted by his actions and his deeds that he is a war criminal."

Organizers encouraged civility at rallies in the city, where protests just after the war began were among the most vocal and angry in the country, with thousands of arrests and frequent conflicts between police and demonstrators.

Police wearing helmets and armed with batons lined the streets Saturday, but they reported no disturbances.

Across Europe, tens of thousands of protesters also packed streets and public parks to protest the war. In England, 45,000 people marched from London's Hyde Park past the American Embassy to Trafalgar Square, while an estimated 15,000 people — some carrying signs reading "Murderer Bush, get out" — marched in Turkey.

Sick Iraqi boy dies before he could go to America for care

Army doctor was awaiting permission for treatment

BY CHARLIE COON
Stars and Stripes

BAQOUBA, Iraq — A sick Iraqi boy being treated by U.S. soldiers pending permission for medical care in the United States died early Sunday in a Baghdad military hospital.

Qais Abbas, known as Abbasi, turned 3 on March 3 at the Teal Medical Facility at Forward Operating Base Warhorse in Baqouba.

A few days later he was flown to Baghdad for treatment at the 86th Combat Support Hospital. Using equipment found in storage, doctors there diagnosed him as having visceral leishmaniasis, an immune-deficiency disease contracted by the bite of an infected sand fly.

Permission for Abbasi to be taken to Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C., for treatment was being pursued through diplomatic and military channels, according to Dr. (Capt.) Matthew Carter of Company C, 203rd Forward Support Battalion, which operates the Teal clinic.

Carter had flown with the boy to Baghdad.

On March 14, Abbasi was flown by helicopter from Baghdad to the nearby air base at Balad for what was believed to be a flight to Washington, Carter said.

But when it was discovered that approval had not yet been granted,

the boy, who had already been treated in Iraqi medical facilities, was brought in late February to the Teal clinic at FOB Warhorse.

"It got started with the soldier on the ground," said Lt. Col.

Oscar J. Hall, commander of the 2-34.

"[Hale] felt we could do more, that we could make a difference in this boy's life."

Among those wanting to help the boy was the mother of the late Capt. John R. Teal, who was killed in action in Baqouba and for whom the Teal Medical Facility is named, and Frances Mayo, the president of Operation AC Inc., a Delaware-based non-profit organization.

The two pledged to pay for Abbasi's transport to Washington if the government turned down the request.

Mayo said she learned about Abbasi in an article on the Stars and Stripes Web site.

"I called [Mrs. Teal] ... and asked her if she wanted me to help this kid," Mayo wrote in an e-mail to Stars and Stripes. "We want to do this in Captain Teal's name."

granted, the boy was returned to Baghdad the next day.

"There was a paperwork mix-up," Carter said a few days later.

"It probably happens when one division is transferring a tank to another division. Nobody really knows who the tank belongs to."

Abbasi was the grandson of a local sheik at a village near Baqouba.

The sheik had been friendly with U.S. forces.

The sick boy was first noticed by 2nd Lt. Christopher Hale of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 34th Armored Regiment, while Hale was working in the sheik's village.

Hale brought the boy's condition to the attention of his compa-

Rice: EU irresponsible if it sells weapons to China

BY ANNE GEARAN
The Associated Press

BEIJING — U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice suggested Sunday that European governments are irresponsible if they sell sophisticated weaponry to China that might one day be used against U.S. forces in the Pacific.

"It is the United States, not Europe, that is defending the Pacific," Rice said. She spoke in Seoul, the penultimate stop on her weeklong tour of Asia, before flying to Beijing.

South Korea, Japan and the United States are all Pacific powers and all contribute resources to keep the region stable, Rice said.

The European Union may soon lift an arms embargo on China that was imposed after the deadly 1989 crackdown on pro-democracy protesters in Tiananmen Square. Lifting the embargo would allow sale of technology and weapons that China badly wants to modernize its creaky military.

Rice

China has recently gone on a military spending spree that Rice said concerns the United States.

"The European Union should do nothing to contribute," to the possibility that Chinese forces might turn European technology on Americans, Rice said after meetings with the South Korean president and foreign minister.

Rice has earlier said that China's recent statements about a possible invasion of Taiwan should give the Europeans pause. China passed a law this month codifying its intention to use military force against Taiwan should the island declare formal independence.

Rice said she would raise U.S. objections to the Taiwan development with Chinese officials in two days of talks, along with long-standing concerns over Chinese human rights practices and violations of intellectual property rights.

Rice will also ask China for more help to persuade communist North Korea to return to international nuclear disarmament talks.

In London, British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw said Sunday the threat of China using military force if Taiwan formally declares independence has clouded prospects for lifting a European Union arms embargo on the mainland.

Blair to face opposition for seat

LONDON — The father of a British soldier killed in Iraq announced Sunday that he plans to challenge Prime Minister Tony Blair for his seat in Parliament.

Reg Keys, 52, said he would run as an independent in Blair's home district of Sedgfield, in northeastern England, in national elections expected in May.

"I'm coming for you, Mr. Blair, but I'm going to do it in a civilized way," Keys said in a news conference at the London studio of music producer Brian Eno. "I want to get the troops brought safely home. Get them out and replace them with U.N. peacekeeping forces."

Blair has faced tough domestic opposition to his decision to join the U.S.-led war, particularly within his governing Labour Party.

Keys, a former ambulance driver, said he was motivated by the deaths of his son, Thomas, 20, and other young people in Iraq.

Qatar blames fatal blast on Egyptian

BY JABER AL-HARMI
The Associated Press

DOHA, Qatar — Qatar on Sunday blamed an Egyptian for a suicide car bomb attack on a Doha theater that killed one Briton, days after an al-Qaida leader purportedly called for attacks on Western interests in the Gulf region as Iraq marks the second anniversary of the U.S.-led invasion.

After Saturday's blast, the largely European audience reportedly streamed out of the hall in the midst of the performance, a rendition of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

Qatari authorities identified the charred body of a suicide bomber inside a vehicle as Omar Ahmed Abdullah Ali, an Egyptian who also owned the car used to carry out the 9:15 p.m. attack on the Doha Players Theater in the northern suburb of Ferek Kelab.

Twelve others, including six Qataris, a Briton, Eritrean and So-mal, were injured in the blast and later released from the hospital, Qatari officials said.

The bombing occurred on the second anniversary of the U.S.-led invasion in Iraq, although it was unclear if the two events were linked. Saleh al-Aoofi, who purportedly heads al-Qaida in the Gulf region, urged militants this week to attack Westerners in Qatar and several other countries.

Nobody claimed responsibility for the attack on the theater, which is popular with Westerners and close to the Doha English Speaking School.

The British Foreign Office confirmed a British citizen had died and said British authorities were assisting Qatar in the bombing investigation. Ten of 12 people injured have been released from hospital.

Americans were among the large number of foreigners in the theater audience, but none were believed to have been injured, U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Patricia Kabra said.

30 killed at Pakistan shrine

QUETTA, Pakistan — Investigators on Sunday sought clues into a bombing that tore through a gathering of thousands at a Shiite Muslim shrine in southwestern Pakistan, killing 30 people and wounding 20, officials said.

Police puzzled over the motive for the attack on the event, attended by both Shiite and Sunni Muslims, as well as minority Hindus. Officials said it could have been sectarian or the result of a personal dispute over control of the shrine.

Mussolini kin appeals decision

MILAN, Italy — Alessandra Mussolini, the granddaughter of Italy's fascist dictator, on Saturday appealed a court decision blocking her from running in a regional election next month.

Mussolini, a deputy in the European Parliament, was prohibited from running in the Lazio region's April 3-4 ballot because of hundreds of alleged fake voter signatures on the list of her party, the right-wing Social Alternative.

She announced Saturday that she had filed an appeal in the nation's top administrative court, according to news wire reports.

Shark tears Australian in half

CANBERRA, Australia — Authorities were hunting Sunday for a 20-foot shark that tore a man in half as he snorkeled off Australia's west coast, an official said.

Geoffrey Brazier, the skipper of a pleasure cruiser, was snorkeling with two tourists when he was attacked Saturday. He died instantly off the Abrolhos Islands, police said. No one else was injured. An air and sea search of the area Sunday failed to find the shark or human remains.

Southern Japan rocked by quake

Magnitude-7.0 temblor responsible for 1 death, at least 400 injuries

BY SHIZUO KAMBAYASHI

The Associated Press

FUKUOKA, Japan — A powerful magnitude-7.0 earthquake jolted southern Japan on Sunday, killing an elderly woman, injuring at least 400 people, and prompting authorities to evacuate half the residents of a tiny island near the epicenter.

Authorities issued a tsunami warning that was later canceled.

The temblor, which hit west of Kyushu Island at 10:53 a.m., was centered about 5½ miles below the seabed, Japan's meteorological agency said. Aftershocks followed — at least one a moderate magnitude-4.2 tremor — and the agency's Masashi Yamamoto warned of more aftershocks measuring up to magnitude-6.0.

A magnitude-7.0 quake can potentially devastate heavily populated areas. But Sunday's temblor didn't directly hit the archipelago, and injuries and damage were minimized by Japan's quake-safe buildings and disaster-prepared population.

The worst damage occurred nearest the quake's epicenter, on Genkai Island, where the shaking touched off landslides and leveled homes. About 120 Japanese troops flew to the island to offer food and medical aid, and to help evacuate more than 400 of the 850 residents to neighboring Kyushu.

Those evacuees joined some 1,500 others in temporary shelters in Fukuoka prefecture.

In Fukuoka, 560 miles southwest of Tokyo, water and gas pipes burst, and hundreds of homes reported power outages. The tremors set off landslides in parts of Fukuoka, Saga and Nagasaki prefectures, and triggered a safety mechanism that halted local and bullet train services in Fukuoka.

A 75-year-old woman died after a section of a stone wall fell on her, a Fukuoka prefectural government spokesman said on the condition of anonymity.

At least 400 people injured by the quake, most in Fukuoka and Saga prefectures, were treated at hospitals, public broadcaster NHK reported. Most of the injured were struck by toppling cabinets, items falling off shelves or shattered glass, or burned by a cooking stove, the network said.

Fukuoka prefectural government's Web site counted 107 injuries, 15 of them serious. Ten people in neighboring Saga prefecture were injured, a prefectural government official said on the condition of anonymity.

The initial jolt lasted about 30 seconds. Minutes after the shaking began, the agency warned of the possibility of 20-inch tsunamis, and authorities cautioned residents near the water to move to higher ground. But an hour after the quake, the agency said there was no danger of a tsunami.

Firefighters check on the safety of residents on Genkai island on Sunday after an earthquake struck off the coast of southern Japan.

Canadian health care free, but slow

BY BETH DUFF-BROWN
The Associated Press

TORONTO — A letter from the Moncton Hospital to a New Brunswick heart patient in need of an electrocardiogram said the appointment would be in three months. It added: "If the person named on this computer-generated letter is deceased, please accept our sincere apologies."

The patient wasn't dead, according to the doctor who showed the letter to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity. But there are many Canadians who claim the long wait for the test and the frigid formality of the letter are indicative of a health system badly in need of emergency care.

Americans who flock to Canada for cheap flu shots often come away impressed at the free and first-class medical care available to Canadians, rich or poor. But tell that to hospital administrators constantly having to cut staff for lack of funds, or to the mother whose teenager was advised she would have to wait up to three years for surgery to repair a torn knee ligament.

"It's like somebody's telling you that you can buy this car, but you can't have it right now," said Jane Pelton.

Rather than leave daughter Emily in pain and a knee brace, the Ontario family opted to pay $3,300 for arthroscopic surgery at a private clinic in Vancouver, with no help from the government.

The average Canadian family pays about 48 percent of its income in taxes each year, partly to fund the health care system. Rates vary from province to province, but Ontario, the most populous, spends roughly 40 percent of every tax dollar on health care, according to the Canadian Taxpayers Federation.

The system is going broke, says the federation, which campaigns for tax reform and private enterprise in health care.

It calculates that at present rates, Ontario will be spending 85 percent of its budget on health care by 2035.

The federal government and virtually every province acknowledge there's a crisis: a lack of physicians and nurses, state-of-the-art equipment and funding. In Ontario, more than 10,000 nurses and hospital workers are facing layoffs over the next two years unless the provincial government boosts funding, says the Ontario Hospital Association, which represents health care providers in the province.

In 1984 Parliament passed the Canada Health Act, which affirmed the federal government's commitment to provide mostly free health care to all, including the 200,000 immigrants arriving each year.

The system is called Medicare (no relation to Medicare in the United States).

However, the delays in the system can be frustrating. Dr. Brian Day, an English-born arthroscopic surgeon, founded Cambie Surgery Center in Vancouver, British Columbia.

He says he got so frustrated at the long delays to book surgeries at the public hospitals in Vancouver that he built his own private clinic. A leading advocate for reform, he testified last June before the Supreme Court in a landmark appeal against a Quebec ruling upholding limits on private care and insurance.

An estimated 4 million of Canada's 33 million people don't have family physicians and more than 1 million are on waiting lists for treatment, according to the Canadian Medical Association.

Ukrainian President Viktor Yushchenko, right, talks to his Russian counterpart Vladimir Putin Saturday during their news conference in Kiev, Ukraine. Putin on Saturday launched a tricky diplomatic foray into Ukraine, now under liberal management, after promising European powers he would support pro-Western President Yushchenko.

Putin seeks to forge ties while on Ukraine visit

BY MARA D. BELLAMY
The Associated Press

KIEV, Ukraine — Russian President Vladimir Putin made a one-day fence-mending trip to Ukraine on Saturday to seek assurances that the country's new pro-Western government would not drive the two former Soviet republics apart.

Putin flew to the Ukrainian capital from Paris and met Ukrainian President Viktor Yushchenko, who won the presidential election in December after street protests forced the reversal of an initial vote count that gave victory to his pro-Kremlin opponent. It was Putin's first visit to Ukraine since the so-called "Orange Revolution."

In Paris, President Jacques Chirac assured Putin that Europe sought good relations with Moscow, and the Russian leader had a similar message for Yushchenko. Common interests demand solid partnership, Putin said.

"During today's meeting I was never left with the feeling that our relationship has problems," Putin said. "There are questions, but we will resolve those in a working manner."

Yushchenko said his goal was for "Vladimir Putin and Russia to understand that the new Ukrainian government is a responsible government, which will always demonstrate honesty."

Saturday's brief visit was the second meeting between the leaders. Yushchenko traveled to the Kremlin a day after his inauguration, fulfilling a campaign promise to preserve a good relationship with Russia even as Ukraine seeks membership in the European Union and NATO.

Ukraine also has about 1,600 troops in Iraq, making it the fourth-largest contributor to the coalition and the largest among non-NATO countries, though Yushchenko and top defense officials ordered the troops to leave by year's end. Eighteen Ukrainian soldiers have been killed in Iraq.

"Russia is our eternal neighbor, which Ukraine wants to see as a friend and strategic partner," Yushchenko said.

Putin's last two trips to Ukraine came in the midst of the bitter presidential campaign, sparking accusations he was campaigning on behalf of Yushchenko's rival, former Prime Minister Viktor Yanukovich.

France goes after prostitution

PARIS — French police raided brothels, budget hotels and parks used by prostitution rings and detained 72 people as part of a week-long crackdown, police said Sunday.

The raids were aimed at nabbing the midlevel members of prostitution rings — the watchmen paid to survey women working the streets, hoteliers who rent rooms by the hour, prostitutes who rent trucks and station them inside large parks for use by sex workers and their clients.

A total of 28 raids were carried out since last Monday in cities across France, including Paris, Bordeaux, Lyon, Nantes and Orleans, police said.

Republicans push bill to keep Schiavo alive

Congress calls special session; parents tell hospice to prepare to reinsert feeding tube

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans, seeing Congress as a last hope for brain-damaged Terri Schiavo, convened an extraordinary Palm Sunday session to pass legislation aimed at prolonging the Florida woman's life. Democrats refused to allow the measure to go ahead with a vote, forcing Republicans to scramble to bring their members back to Washington.

Republicans were denying that political motivations were behind legislative efforts to reconnect Schiavo's feeding tube. "I hope we're not ... making this human tragedy a political issue," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz. "We've got plenty of other issues that are political in nature for us to fight about."

Leaders of both parties agreed Saturday on legislation that they said would allow Schiavo's feeding tube, which was disconnected Friday afternoon, to be reinserted while federal courts review her case.

But when the House convened Sunday afternoon, Democrats made clear they would not let it pass on a voice vote, requiring the assembly of a quorum for a roll call vote.

With that, Republicans called a recess and said they planned to meet as early as one minute after midnight on Monday, if they get the needed quorum of 218. The Senate was ready to give its quick approval, and President Bush was planning to return from his ranch in Crawford, Texas, to sign it.

The bill, "for the relief of the parents of Theresa Marie Schiavo," gives the parents the right to file suit in federal court relating to the withdrawal of food and medical treatment needed to sustain the life of their daughter.

The bill states that the U.S. District Court, after determining the merits of the suit, "shall issue such declaratory and injunctive relief as may be necessary to protect the rights" of the woman. Injunctive relief in this case could mean the reinserting of feeding tubes.

The House planned to meet Sunday afternoon in hopes of approving the measure. If any congressman objected to the bill being taken up on an expedited basis, a vote would have to wait until Monday. The Senate would have to act after the House completes work.

President Bush was planning to return from Washington from his ranch in Crawford, Texas, because of the Capitol Hill developments.

McCain was asked on ABC's "This Week" about a memo suggesting GOP lawmakers could use the case to appeal to Christian conservative voters.

"I think that the motivation of my colleagues is that we want to give this young woman's family a chance to care for her for as long as she lives," McCain said. "I don't think it's any more complicated than that."

He also pointed out, "The Democrats do not disagree with the unanimous voice vote in the Senate implementing this."

But some House Democrats were objecting to congressional involvement. Rep. Robert Wexler, D-Fla., said he plans to make an objection Sunday in an effort to stop the vote.

Rep. Earl Blumenauer, D-Ore., said in a statement, "The assault by ideologues and intolerant people who would impose government on these most personal decisions continues."

Hanging their hopes on Congress, Terri Schiavo's parents notified her hospice in Pinellas Park, Fla., to prepare to have her feeding tube reinserted on Sunday, her third day without food or water.

Schiavo's husband, Michael, criticized congressional leaders Sunday for intruding in the fight.

"I'm outraged, and I think that every American in this country should also be outraged that this government is trampling all over a personal family matter that has been adjudicated in the courts for seven years," he told CNN. "I think that the Congress has as these most important things to discuss."

Annan to propose big changes at U.N.

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Secretary-General Kofi Annan on Monday will propose restructuring a U.N. human rights panel, ask for a swift decision to expand the Security Council and request sweeping changes designed to prevent new scandals, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The blueprint for reform, according to a draft copy obtained by the Times, also proposes ways to keep the U.N. the primary setting for global security decisions and the key player in international development issues.

The reforms depend on the endorsement of the General Assembly and the agreement of world leaders who are coming to a U.N. summit in September, the Times said in a story posted to its Web site.

Many of the ideas in the document have been floated in recent months by special panels on U.N. reform and global development that Annan commissioned. But fierce reactions from some governments led Annan to temper a proposed definition of terrorism and stop short of requiring criteria for membership on the human rights panel.

With the U.N. still bruised by the U.S. decision to lead an invasion of Iraq without the Security Council's blessing, Annan has searched for ways to keep the Bush administration engaged in the world body and address the U.S.'s post-Sept. 11 sense of vulnerability.

In an attempt to put the U.N. at the center of security policy, the report calls for a comprehensive anti-terrorism convention by September 2006, new measures to stem nuclear proliferation and an agreement on rules for the use of force and preemptive action, the Times said.

3 missing after explosion at Colo. lodge

The Associated Press

A flight crew prepares to take off from Paonia High School late Saturday in Paonia, Colo. The school served as a triage area after a fiery explosion, that may have been caused by propane, destroyed a nearby mountain lodge.

PAONIA, Colo. — Three youngsters were missing and 16 others were injured in a fiery explosion that destroyed a remote mountain lodge, authorities said Sunday.

The three missing, ages 3, 12, and 15, were all from the same family, Delta County Sheriff Fred McKee said.

"We are very concerned that they were last seen in the lodge," McKee said.

McKee said the explosion Saturday at the Electric Mountain Lodge may have been caused by propane, which was used for heating. Investigators planned to enter the burned-out lodge Sunday if the wreckage had cooled sufficiently.

Because the lodge in the Gunnison National Forest on the western slopes of the Rockies is isolated by heavy snow, helicopters took injured people off the mountain while ground crews used tracked vehicles to ferry emergency medical teams to the site.

Injuries ranged from burns and smoke inhalation to "serious compound fractures," according to officials.

'GoodFellas' ex-mobster charged

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. — Former mobster-turned-chef Henry Hill, whose gangland experiences inspired the movie "GoodFellas," has been charged with felony drug possession.

Police said Hill's luggage was searched on Aug. 15 at the North Platte Regional Airport and methamphetamine and cocaine were found.

Hill, portrayed by Ray Liotta in "GoodFellas," had sought refuge in the witness protection program after agreeing to testify against his former mob bosses from New York.

Hill left the witness protection program and now lives in North Platte with his wife. He has been working as a chef and helping establish an Italian restaurant.

Escaped Ga. hostage is first instant celebrity

BY DAN THANH DAN

The (Baltimore) Sun

There's no telling when instant fame will strike next.

It happened to massage therapist Amber Frey and Army soldier Jessica Lynch in 2003. Nine Pennsylvania coal miners endured it in 2002 and Air Force pilot Scott O'Grady emerged from it a courageous hero in 1995.

Now add Ashley Smith to those ranks.

The 26-year-old widowed mother in Atlanta went from total unknown to in-demand celebrity after persuading her captor Brian G. Nichols to set her free after a seven-hour hostage ordeal last weekend. It was a story made all the more compelling because Nichols was the suspect in the killings of a judge, a court reporter, a deputy and later, a federal agent.

Now the media frenzy begins. "You can never really put a price on it but I think this could be a figure book," says Andrea Barzvi, a literary agent at International Creative Management. "But more than money, she could have a best seller on her hands. People want to know how she did it."

"It's a story of courage, faith, perseverance, hope, heroism and survival," Barzvi says.

As the biggest get in the news right now, Smith reportedly has received at least four offers from book publishers who are eager to tell her story. She's also been inundated with proposals for movies, talk show appearances and media interviews.

In a world searching for heroes, prone to idolizing celebrities and tuned to 24-hour news, ordinary people who do extraordinary things are a hot commodity, says Leo Braudy, a University of Southern California professor who wrote "The Frezzy of Renown."

"Normality is validated when ordinary people do extraordinary things," Braudy says.

Just look at Frey, whose claim to fame is revealing herself as the secret mistress who helped the authorities arrest and convict her married lover, Scott Peterson. Frey's book, "Witness for the Prosecution of Scott Peterson," hit the shelves in January and became an Amazon best seller. Lynch nabbed a $1 million book deal (split between her and Pulitzer Prize newspaperman Rick Bragg), appearances on television and a made-for-TV movie. Interest in her prisoner-of-war story didn't subside even after it was revealed that media accounts exaggerated her heroism in Iraq.

In the week since Nichols surrendered, salacious details have emerged in the Michael Jackson molestation case, actor Robert Blake was declared not guilty in his wife's murder trial, and Scott Peterson was sentenced to death.

"In a slow news cycle, Smith's story would have gotten a longer ride," says Maureen Orth, a Vanity Fair reporter. "It's been a fairly spectacular week for crime stories. Smith's story has kind of been lost in the shuffle. But perhaps if he hasn't been wrong dry by myriad cable appearances, newspaper stories, etc., there may be parts of her story that are still fascinating."

Jamie Foxx is congratulated by actors Sidney Poitier and Diahann Carroll on Saturday after he won the Outstanding Actor in a Motion Picture award for "Ray," at the 36th NAACP Image Awards in Los Angeles.

'Ray' gets 4 trophies at NAACP Image Awards

BY LYNN ELBER
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The biopic "Ray" about the life of legendary singer Ray Charles won four NAACP Image Awards, including an outstanding actor trophy that added to its star Jamie Foxx's amfurl of honors.

"Ray" was nominated for a leading seven awards, including outstanding motion picture and outstanding actor in a motion picture for Foxx, who received the best actor Oscar at last month's Academy Awards.

Foxx exchanged long embraces Saturday night with presenters Sidney Poitier and Diahann Carroll as he accepted his NAACP trophy.

The 36th annual Image Awards, which honor films, television, literature and music by and about people of color, were handed out at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion. The ceremony was hosted by actor Chris Tucker.

"This has been an absolute wonderful ride," said Foxx, who also won a Golden Globe and Screen Actors Guild Award for his portrayal of the music legend.

It was the second year in a row that Ray Charles loomed large at the Image Awards, which honor works by and about people of color.

He was inducted into the NAACP Hall of Fame in 2004, three months before his death at 73.

Winners were chosen by members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization. Other honors for "Ray" included:

Kerry Washington, outstanding actress in a motion picture, and Regina King, outstanding supporting actress in a motion picture.

In her acceptance speech, Washington said the country needs the NAACP's activism more than ever.

Speaking at a ceremony that, unlike most other awards shows, eagerly blends politics and entertainment, she warned that the rights of people of color, women and the poor are "in danger of being stripped" away.

Academy Award winner Morgan Freeman won the Image Award for supporting actor in his role in the film "Million Dollar Baby."

Kanye West was named outstanding new artist for his album, "College Dropout," while Grammy-winner Usher was honored as outstanding male artist. "American Idol" winner Fantasia was named outstanding female artist.

West was humble in his acceptance speech. "I made some mistakes and I learned from those mistakes," he told the audience, characterizing the past year as "a trip."

U.S. Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., received the Chairman's Award, while the Vanguard Award went to pop star Prince. Talk show host and entrepreneur Oprah Winfrey also was inducted into the NAACP Hall of Fame.

Can money buy happiness?

MarketWatch

NEW YORK — Can money really buy happiness? The surprising answer is "yes" — but only after some work on your part, writes journalist Laura Rowley in her new book, "Money & Happiness: A Guide to Living the Good Life."

People treat money as more than a financial entity. They see it as an extension of their beliefs and personalities. For example, people who have endured hard times and poverty will scrimp and save everything, even if they are now wealthy.

For money to buy happiness, you must separate it from that emotional baggage and instead use it to achieve what you really value.

Ask yourself what money means to you. Analyze how you

We'll take 'sedentary' things

Hey, I think it's cool that servicemembers at Camp Victory want to have a paintball field, and I applaud them for trying to spend morale, Welfare and Recreation funds for something that they feel is productive ("Paintball field in Iraq?" letter, March 12).

As for all the "sedentary" things they have—the Internet, pool tables and movies—could they pack them up and send them to my soldiers? We don't have any of that.

Here at Patrol Base Razor we have a dining/gyrn conference/leisure room and soon-with-DVD (no satellite) room. And in order to go outside and play sports, we get to suit up and carry real weapons with bullets!

I have nothing but love for all the soldiers and civilians who send us support. My chain of command ensures we are receiving what can be provided to us, and truly are concerned about our welfare. As pros to the dining facility guys at Forward Operating Base Brassfield-Mora for the microwave pizzas and Gatorade. Thanks!

We don't have a post exchange, and items get trucked in on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

So, for all of you unhappy with the way you have it, come on down. We can chat while we burn the crackers in the morning, and get some "pray and spray" in the afternoon in fabulous downtown Samarra.

The soldiers here in Razor, Patrol Base Olson and Patrol Base Uvanni are amazing people. Every day they put on a smile, go out to do what has to be done, and laugh at all of you complaining about how bad you have it.

Don't come out here and tell us how good you have it; we've become accustomed to what we don't have.

Sgt. 1st Class James A. Aikens

No time for paintball

In response to "Paintball field in Iraq?" (letter, March 12), I say this: Get a job.

I was at Forward Operating Base Falcon for 11 months. It was hard enough to find time to sleep and do laundry, much less play paintball games. I found quite a unique way to hone the skills needed to perform the grunt tasks that my field artillery unit had been reorganized to accomplish. It was called patrolling, raids, being targeted by roadside bombs and car bombs, etc.

I could also take this time to write about how why I am not eligible for the Combat Infantryman Badge, which is a very prestigious award. At the same time, I am eligible for an award that has stirred a lot of controversy—the Close Combat Badge.

I believe they should just do away with this award (the CCB) altogether. You will have a combat patch to prove that you are at war, if that is still what you want to call it at Camp Victory. Maybe they could make all the servicemembers CBK (Close Burger King) badges.

It's all about recognition

Whatever happened to seeing that I have been an infantryman for 23 years and an assigned with all this talk of Combat Infantryman and Close Combat badges. Part of what noncombat arms people don't seem to understand is that those of us who elected to be in combat arms did so to belong to something special, not to get ribbons and badges. Our reward, we've always known, comes from our peers.

Today the Army of One really is about individual recognition; they've said it themselves. I want my recognition.

Jump boots, berets, Airborne tabs, cords and wings—all of these things are given to those who never wanted to earn them. But the Army of One has decided to issue badges, berets, tabs and ribbons in the hope it generates pride. Not likely.

This is not the first time cooks, clerks and drivers have fought and served with the infantry. It's just the first time so many individuals have wanted recognition.

Sgt. Elias Banales

Don't give them a badge

I am an infantryman currently serving my second tour in Iraq with the 3rd Infantry Division.

Reading Stars and Stripes daily has me upset because of the tremendous response to the Close Combat Badge. I understand that those soldiers not in the 11 (infantry) series who come under fire should be given credit for what they have done. But they should not be given a badge by their own.

Sure, they took fire; sure, they lost soldiers; and sure, they might have done something that closely resembles infantry work. They didn't intentionally go looking for people to attack; they went out to do their mission.

During the war, I went out looking for the enemy. That is why I joined the infantry to be the man on the front line, to be the one getting shot at by those other people don't have to. I chose it; so yes, I deserve my Combat Infantryman Badge.

Most of the soldiers who went into other military occupational specialties did that so they wouldn't get shot at. Yet, when they do, they feel they are entitled to something that I and my fellow infantrymen hold so dear to us. Why is that?

The bottom line is simple. If you want a badge for combat, join the infantry.

AFN needs diverse opinions

Rush Limbaugh is not of interest to all. Equal time needs to go to more moderate interests, and, failing that, to progressive ones.

I hereby launch a campaign to hear Air America once, at prime time, for every time Rush is on the air. Please let your local American Forces Network radio station know that you need to hear more than a paid announcement from the party line.

Any other point of view is absolutely necessary. Rush's sources and motivations are highly suspect, and it would be interesting to look on White House pay records for what amounts to go to the "Executive in Broadcasting Network."

I would also be curious as to what influence leads this broadcast to be on AFN on prime time four to five days a week, with political backlash from my fellow Texan Jim Hightower, for five minutes, buried somewhere in the early morning.

If we don't demand freedom of choice, we won't get it.

AF cost-cutting suggestions

The March 16 article "Terror war forcing Air Force to cut costs" (Europe edition, "Air Force cutting costs amid shortfall projection in billions," Mideast edition) says that the top Air Force generals are ordering the cutting of nonwar-related spending because the war is costing more than budgeted.

Would someone suggest to them that perhaps they can save by cutting down on the "Combat Pretty" activities and lengthening Air Force combat tours from four months to 12 to 18 months like the Army—or at least somewhat longer like the other services, saving immensely on rotation costs?

Checkpoints for fore split-second decisions

BY PAUL RIECKHOFF

For troops serving in Iraq, few decisions are black and white. Every day is a world of gray.

This month's shooting death of Italian intelligence agent Nicola Calipari at an American military checkpoint was a mistake that unveiled the enormity of the demands we place upon our troops every day in Iraq.

When I served in Iraq, I understood the tremendous responsibility I had as an American soldier. I knew that every single thing I did reflected the face of America to the world. The weight of this knowledge made serving in Iraq hard for me, and all of my fellow soldiers. Conveying what that responsibility felt like to civilians was even harder.

Think about it. Not only do our troops have to be concerned with roadside bombs, protecting their buddies, rocket-propelled grenade attacks, avoiding civilian casualties, struggling to pay their bills, and the back-door draft, but they also have to worry about being crucified by the world press afterward. No wonder roughly 1 in 5 troops returns home with post-traumatic stress disorder.

Our troops live in a fishbowl for all to see — the ultimate in reality TV. And they face a crucible, not in the threat of the insurgency, but in the world's largest postwar gallery — the press. I am sure Green Bay Packers Quarterback Brett Favre can empathize, to a degree, with the scrutiny our troops face. But the pressure of making a big play in the fourth quarter of the Super Bowl is nothing compared with the pressure that a young soldier experiences at a checkpoint in Iraq. Our troops deal with the greatest challenge of Monday-morning quarterbacks this planet has ever seen.

Put yourself in our shoes. Imagine looking down the barrel of your weapon and deciding whether to shoot a white sedan, at three in the morning, barreling toward your squad, the day after your best friend was killed by a car bomb on the same road.

This is the colossal task we are asking our sons and daughters to complete in our name: to have incredible personal danger while diplomatically executing U.S. foreign policy in Arabic before the world media. They have done everything we have asked of them, and then some.

So, to those who are eager to throw judgment at our people in uniform, I ask you: please slow down. This is not the Michael Jackson trial, and you were not there. You were not in that car, or behind that machine gun. And until a thorough investigation is conducted, our soldiers deserve at least the benefit of the doubt.

Giuliana Sgrena, the Italian journalist who speculates that she was targeted by the American military at the checkpoint, stated, "For the Americans, war is war, human life doesn't count for much."

Ma'am, this could not be further from the truth. Please do not blame the warriors for a war that you oppose.

We, the American soldiers, do value human life — tremendously. We see it wrenched from our Iraqi and American friends every day. But mistakes do happen in wars, and we will replay them in our heads forever. We often put ourselves at tremendous risk in order to keep Iraqi civilians safe. I wonder how many times Ms. Sgrena has taken off her helmet and body armor in a crowded meeting with a local imam in order to demonstrate her trust and support.

During my tour as an infantryman in Iraq, I manned and commanded hundreds of checkpoints. I never saw any American soldier deliberately target civilians — Iraqis, Italian or otherwise. And if I had, I guarantee you that those soldiers would be serving time in Leavenworth right now. Not only is Ms. Sgrena's statement wrong, but also it is insulting. We soldiers are not cold-hearted, baby-killing robots.

Everyone in Iraq is scared — not just the civilians.

The death of the Mr. Calipari is a terrible tragedy for all involved. But the American soldiers deserve a fair hearing without having to face baseless claims assuiling their professionalism and moral judgment. Our soldiers are patriots caught in the ultimate Catch-22. We are America's sons and daughters doing the best we can, and playing out our cards, despite the very tough hand we have been dealt. We are trying desperately to avoid both killing innocent civilians and ending up in a box ourselves.

Paul Rieckhoff served as an Army infantry Platoon Leader in Iraq with the 3rd Infantry and 1st Armor Divisions. He is now the Executive Director of Operations with an Iraq Veterans group that advocates on behalf of troops and veterans.

"In our prayers": No deference to spiritual essence

"You're in our prayers." I have noticed this phrase being offered more and more lately.

Whether coming from newscasters, movie stars, politicians and other public figures is so, "We're sorry to report that Joe at the station has cancer — Joe, please know you are in our prayers," or "To all the servicemen and women out there, please know you are in our prayers," to what I've often heard or overheard in private conversations, as in, "I'm so sorry to hear that — know you are in our prayers."

I can't help but worry that "you're in our prayers" has become the new "have a good day." (By the way, it's usually "our prayers" instead of what would be the more accountable "my prayers.") I am not talking here about folks who might say, "Wow, I am really going to pray for you on that." I've been the recipient of such genuine love many times. Nor am I suggesting I can always know what's in the heart of someone who says, "You're in our prayers." That newscaster or movie star or politician might really go home, get on his knees, and pray for the intended. That's great.

I'm just suggesting that "you're in our prayers" is a phrase that today one often hears uttered too casually. I know this most because, even as a professing Christian, I have to admit I have too often been a casual utterer, and I've had to call myself to account on it.

I mean, real prayer means something. It's powerful. At some level we must recognize it as uniquely so or we wouldn't offer it — even casually — as one of the most comforting things we can say to someone else.

"How you're in our discussion group?" just doesn't cut it.

"You're in our thoughts" is better, but it's almost always coupled with prayer as in, "you're in our thoughts and prayers."

We want the positive benefits of prayer, which we recognize to be powerful. But we too often, it seems, call it down as perhaps only some sort of magical incantation to ward off evil spirits or something. Ironically, I think we can sometimes, as a being, show what we recognize as being true by what we treat vainly. So, conversely to the positive connotations of "you're in our prayers," people regularly take the names "God" and "Jesus Christ" in vain in either excitement or more often anger. Yet, no one would think to say, "George Washington!"

when he's screaming at his computer, or say, "Steve damn it!" when his car has broken down. Because no one believes there is any power in such phrases, so there is no point in taking them in vain.

And so back to the "prayer" front: I'm not at all sure if the "you're in our prayers" language is more common than it used to be, or if I'm just noticing more.

What is clear is that we live in an increasingly secular age. Yet when almost anyone is confronted with a person he cares about who is in pain or sadness, no matter what the religious beliefs or practice of either of them — he believes that the most powerful thing he can say, the thing that will offer by far the most comfort and assurance, is "know that you are in our prayers."

I'm not at all suggesting we stop offering such assurance. I am suggesting that every time we hear that phrase, and especially every time we say it, we really think about it. If we believe that true prayer is really powerful, if we believe it offers assurance or comfort when we promise it to others, then we should be careful to not leave it just as words but to pray, and pray rightly for the person for whom the prayer was promised.

If we have no intention of genuinely lifting up that person in true prayer, then we have no right to offer such words of comfort — or they are rendered empty.

I also can't help but find it fascinating that a culture that largely disdains God is so used to hearing people, even people on the national stage with no known religious beliefs, so regularly appeal to the power of prayer. Particularly it's that we want that power of prayer — but religious or not, we too often don't want what the powerful God behind true prayer requires of us.

Fox News Channel news anchor Steve Doocy, right, calls to Winn-Dixie, a star of 'Because of Winn-Dixie' on the set of the 'Fox and Friends' morning show in New York on Friday. Doocy and guest co-host Kathie Lee Gifford were interviewing Anna Sophia Robb, who also appears in the film.

Fugees reunite for show

Laurn Hill and Wyclef Jean, former members of the Fugees, reunited onstage in an adrenaline-charged charity concert for tsunami victims in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

An enthusiastic crowd of 15,000 people attended Friday's seven-hour "Force of Nature" show at Stadium Putra, which raised more than $2.6 million to rebuild tsunami-devastated communities in Indonesia, Thailand, Sri Lanka and India.

"This is history in the making," said Jean, kneeling in front of Hill. "Do you all understand what's happening on this stage? I'm too emotional right now."

Jean also delivered the night's most poignant moment. While gently chanting "we'll never forget the tsunami victims," he instructed the stadium lights to be turned off while the audience waved lighted cell phones in the darkness.

School honors Miller

The University of Michigan regrets he approved the design for the 250-seat Arthur Miller Theatre, honoring the Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright and 1938 graduate who died last month.

The theater plan that won approval Thursday will be part of a $42-million renovation of the Drama Center at the Ann Arbor school.

Miller attended Michigan during the height of the Depression and said he did so because it cost only $65 a year.

Swank's fine ruled on

A New Zealand court ruled on Hilary Swank's appeal of a $150 fine for bringing fruit into the country and the decision was sent to the actress in a letter, a court spokeswoman said.

Swank was fined on Jan. 15 after she failed to declare an apple and an orange in her handbag when she arrived at Auckland International Airport.

A court reviewed Swank's case in private Friday after she wrote a letter defending her actions and appealing the fine.

Thousands of visitors arriving in New Zealand are slapped with on-the-spot fines each year for not declaring agricultural products such as fruit. Few contest the fines.

Flick 'Because of Winn-Dixie' raises profile of Anna Sophia Robb

BY ROBERT DENERSTEIN

Scraps Howard News Service

The acting bug often bites early, but in the case of Anna Sophia Robb, it must have been buzzing around her cradle.

The 11-year-old developed the acting itch between ages 2 and 3.

"I saw people on TV and I loved being around people and performing," said Robb. "I loved to pretend. I think that's really what got me going."

The young actress experienced a considerable boost in her profile with the release of "Because of Winn-Dixie," a Wayne Wang-directed adaptation of a much-admired Kate DiCamillo novel about a girl and her dog. The movie debuted last month in the States.

And come summer, Robb will receive even more attention when she's seen in Tim Burton's eagerly awaited "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory," playing Violet Beauregarde to Johnny Depp's Willie Wonka in this remake.

"I read the book before I knew I was going to do the movie," said Robb of "Winn-Dixie." "It had a seriousness — if that's a word — that kids could understand. ... Little kids can start understanding what they might be able to deal with in life."

The movie tells the story of Opal Buloni (Robb), a girl who moves to a small Southern town (the movie was filmed in Louisiana) with her preacher father (Jeff Daniels). Opal's alcoholic mom splits years ago, leaving Opal lonely and friendless, a condition exaggerated by a move to a new town. Enter Winn-Dixie, a rambunctious Pecosy shepherd. The dog befriends Opal, and life begins to turn around.

Wearing a sweater, a jean-skirt and a tan pair of Uggs for an interview that took place in the children's reading room of the main branch of the Denver Public Library, the self-possessed Robb had no trouble answering questions. Is she anything like Opal? Not really.

"My mom (an interior designer) is wonderful. My dad (an architect) talks to me a ton. I don't have a big dog. I have a little one."

To land the role, Robb competed against 650 young actors who submitted audition tapes. She was called to Los Angeles, met the director and eventually traveled to Louisiana for a screen test.

Before "Winn-Dixie," Robb had been in a short film and had done commercial work.

"When I had an agent in Denver, I was doing commercials and voiceovers. Just little things. Then I started my acting classes ... I had gymnastics three to six hours a week. Then I'd go swimming. I had Irish step dance. I had voice. And school. It was very busy. As soon as I went out to L.A., it was all dropped. I quit Irish dance. I quit gymnastics."

Robb is now schooled by her mother and by tutors on the set. She takes voice and piano lessons.

"I go swimming for P.E.," she said. "I go snowboarding whenever I have a chance."

Not that she's had much time lately for sliding down hills. After "Winn-Dixie," Robb traveled to Canada to make a TV movie — "Samantha: An American Girl Holiday" — about a girl who learns to be a proper Victorian young lady. Next came London.

"For 'Charlie,' they asked me if I could come to London for a half a year. I said, 'Sure, I'll go.' So we packed up our stuff and left."

London meant working with Depp. "At first I was a little nervous.

Then you meet him. He's this totally normal guy ... Kind of quiet. A wonderful actor. It's kind of scary in the movie, watching him be Willie Wonka and then he can snap right out of it and be Johnny."

Aside from having a pigeon lodge its foot in her mouth during the shooting of a pet-shop scene every now and again."

As mature as Robb can sound, there are limits to what she's allowed to do. Take movies, for example.

"When I heard that Wayne Wang was the director of 'Winn-Dixie,' my dad said, 'Oh, we'll watch all his films.' We looked him up on IMDb (Internet Movie Data Base). The movies were rated PG-13 and R. I was 9 at the time. I think in a couple of more years I'll be able to watch them."

Her own movie tastes seem well-defined.

"I like anything, really, as long as it's not cheesy and always happy. I like more dark stories. I like stuff that has a happy ending, but isn't sugary sweet. I love the Harry Potter movies and the books. I love the 'Lord of the Rings' stories and 'The Incredibles.'"

$50 kidnapping

FL FORT MYERS — Three teenagers kidnapped a 15-year-old and ordered his father to drop off a $50 ransom at a Taco Bell restaurant, authorities said. The father called police instead, and the teens were arrested.

Police said the dispute began over $50 that David Gibbs, 15, owed to Joseph Garrett, 17. Gibbs went to Garrett's apartment, and Garrett asked him to repay the money, police said.

Gibbs couldn't pay up, so Garrett and two other teens punched him in the face and held him at knife-point, then forced him to phone his father and ask him to drop the money in a planter at the Taco Bell, police said.

Samuel Aido, 16, and Victoria Aido, 15, were arrested. Garrett turned himself in the next day.

Tuna protection plan

HI HONOLULU — The council responsible for managing the fisheries of the western Pacific Ocean has come up with an initial plan to help prevent overfishing of bigeye tuna, a favorite of Japan's sashimi market.

Only about 5 percent of the bigeye tuna harvested from the Pacific is caught in the U.S. Exclusive Economic Zone — the waters between three and 200 miles off the coasts of Hawaii, American Samoa and the Northern Mariana Islands.

In December, the National Marine Fisheries notified the Western Pacific Regional Fishery Management Council that bigeye tuna is being overfished and ordered the council to come up with a plan by June 14, when the council will next meet to address overfishing.

Although the council's initial plans are enforceable only within the U.S. waters, the council included recommendations for foreign vessels as well.

Tribe short of water

SD SIOUX FALLS — Some 14,000 residents of the Cheyenne River Indian Reservation could run out of water by August because of a drought along the Missouri River basin, officials said.

The tribe's list of potential problems stretches from health concerns to firefighting. The reservation's schools and its only hospital and clinic would have to close.

"It will be more than just running out of water for a couple of days. There will be 14,000 people that have no water whatsoever," said Wayne Ducheneaux, a tribal official and member of a task force working to come up with a water plan.

Fewer on the reservation is complicating the matter, said Rebecca Kidder, a lawyer for the tribe.

Oceans get loud

MA BOSTON — The ocean was flat and the winter darkness over Cape Cod Bay was unbroke by ship lights. But below the bay's surface, Christopher Clark found things weren't as serene as they seemed.

The bay is saturated with sound. "It's just a great, big amphitheater," said Clark, a Cornell bioacoustics scientist who monitored the bay with underwater listening devices.

The sound carrying through the bay that evening was part of an ever louder manmade din that's filling the world's oceans, and some say harming marine life.

High-profile whale beachings have been linked to sonar blasts and sparked fierce public debate over the military's use of sound in national defense. But a broader concern for scientists is rising levels of ocean background noise, much of it generated by commercial shipping, and whether it interferes with the way the entire sea has operated for eons.

Hearing is the primary sense for marine life, which uses sound for navigation and communication.

Nurse donates kidney

MO ST. LOUIS — Kay Plozicka said it found it hard to see her patients suffering when she was blessed with such good health.

So the dialysis center nurse offered one of her kidneys to 58-year-old Joe Cline, who accepted. The transplant surgery was performed March 8.

"I am a religious person. That had some role in it," said Plozicka, of Litchfield, Ill., about an hour east of St. Louis.

"But I wanted to give back to someone a gift like the gift that I had gotten."

Plozicka said she knew after becoming a dialysis nurse five years ago that she would probably donate a kidney to a patient one day. Her only requirement was that the recipient had to commit to a lifetime regimen of anti-rejection medicine.

She believed Cline would be diligent because he desperately wanted to live for his 5-year-old grandson, Hunter.

"I wanted to see if I could get him to the goal of being there for Hunter, his wife, and his daughter," she said.

Diving pig dies

TX AUSTIN — An electrical problem may lie to blame for the death of a stunt-diving pig at the Star of Texas Fair and Rodeo.

The animal known as "Big Red" died after diving off a platform into a heated pool as part of Randall's High Diving Pig Show.

The pigs have performed the stunts many times, but owner Virgil Randall said he has had trouble with the pool's electricity recently.

Rodeo officials were investigating the death.

Deer harvest declines

PA HARRISBURG — Hunters killed more than 409,000 deer during the 2004-05 deer season, a 12 percent drop from the previous season, the state Game Commission said.

The estimate released is the sixth highest since 1986, when the agency began compiling deer-harvest statistics.

"What these harvest figures reinforce is what we've been hearing from many hunters — they didn't see or harvest as many deer this past hunting season in some areas," said Calvin W. DuBrock, the commission's wildlife management bureau director.

The commission will use the estimates when it meets on April 25 and 26 to give final approval to schedules and bag limits for the 2005-06 hunting season.

Teen alcohol loophole

VA RICHMOND — A bill written to put liquor off-limits to youthful drinkers at private parties could permit boozey prom parties or frat bash right out of "Animal House," groups opposed to teen drinking contend.

Even the bill's sponsor, Del. Rob Bell, wants the governor to amend a sentence in his legislation to fix the problem, and the Washington-based Beer Institute supports the request.

"The amendment by the governor would be a good idea because it would make sure the courts know you can't serve liquor to kids unless their parents are there," said Bell, R-Albemarle.

"But if you put a keg in your back yard and everyone comes over for it, that's the sort of thing we're trying to stop," he said.

The law now allows people who hold parties in their own homes to serve alcohol to anyone regardless of age.

Hold on!

Alexander Rober, from Bend, Ore., wrestles a steer to the ground to score an 8.2 in the first go-around at the Dodge National Finals Circuit Rodeo in Pocatello, Idaho.

Decided team

Members of the Virginia High School girls track team jog through the snow as they practice in Olcott Park in Virginia, Minn. The team took advantage of the mid-20 degree temperatures to get in a couple miles of outdoor training.

He does windows

First officer Mark Fisher leans out the window of a Boeing 737 to clean his half of the front windows prior to the Southwest Airlines flight leaving Birmingham, Ala., bound for New Orleans. The captain of the aircraft, Steve Little, did his half earlier.

I spy a spy!

Hilton Head Elementary School second-graders Garrett Von Minden, right, and Matthew Mehlinger came dressed as FBI agents to the school's career day on Hilton Head Island, S.C. Von Minden said he chose to be an agent because "you can spy and arrest people."

Waiting patiently

Allendale Elementary students and members of the school's dance company wait to meet South Carolina Gov. Mark Sanford during his tour in Allendale, S.C.

Good times

Tibetan monks from the Drepung Loseling Monastery laugh as they walk together following a special water ceremony along Little Sugar Creek in Charlotte, N.C.

Giant squid mystery

CA DANA POINT — The mystery of the giant squid is deepening.

Dead jumbo squid are again washing up along Orange County's coastline, baffling scientists who are trying to find out why.

The Ocean Institute in Dana Point has conducted some of the research, shipping specimens to the Santa Barbara Museum of Natural History and Stanford University for further study.

Scientists at the institute dissected a 5-foot-long, 15-pound female Humboldt squid that was filled with parasites and sand. More than a 100 squid have been spotted between Dana Point and San Clemente.

Still, there are no answers. Scientists believe the squid are swimming north from Mexico to follow food sources, forcing them to come closer to the surface and shore. Squid normally live and hunt 3,000 feet below the water's surface.

Cow pie wildfire probe

CO LONGMONT — Authorities are investigating whether Forest Service workers can be charged with arson for a 900-acre wildfire that was ignited after gusty winds carried flaming cow dung outside a controlled burn site.

Weld County District Attorney Ken Buck said he received several complaints from farmers and ranchers in the Pawnee National Grassland area, where the Forest Service was conducting a controlled burn of prairie weeds March 11.

Callers complained the fire shouldn't have been set because of high winds, and that the fire endangered farm property.

No marriage for cousins

PA HOLLIDAYSBURG — A county judge refused to make an exception for two first cousins who want to marry, even though the couple assured the judge they don't want to have children.

Blair County Judge Jolene Kopriva denied the marriage license application for first cousins Eleanor Amrhein, 46, and Donald W. Andrews Sr., 39, of Logan Township.

The couple say they have been together for several years, but Kopriva said state law bars first cousins from marrying because of an increased likelihood their children will have birth defects.

Kopriva told the couple her ruling would not prevent them from being married in another state that permits it.

About half of the states allow first cousins to marry, according to www.state-line.org, a Web site on state laws.

Wholesome cheerleading

TX AUSTIN — The Friday night lights in Texas could soon be without bumptin' and grindin' cheerleaders.

Legislation filed by state Rep. Al Edwards of Houston would put an end to "sexually suggestive" performances at high school athletic events and other extracurricular competitions.

"It's just too sexually oriented, you know, the way they're shaking their behinds and going on, breaking it down," said Edwards, a 26-year veteran of the Texas House.

Under Edwards' bill, if a school district knowingly permits such a performance, state funds would be reduced in an amount to be determined by the education commissioner.

Edwards said he filed the bill after seeing several instances of such ribald performances in his district.

Sex abuse alleged

NY A man who was charged with raping and sodomizing seven children in Queens has confessed to assaulting more children, authorities said.

Michael Flory, 48, was arraigned on five charges of rape, criminal sexual acts and sexual abuse against five girls and two boys aged between 7 and 11 years old. Some of them lived near Flory's former home in College Point section of Queens.

He allegedly raped, sodomized and otherwise sexually abused the children in his home and in his van.

Authorities are investigating whether he assaulted any of the three children he has with his wife, with whom he lives in West Hempstead in Long Island.

School drug testing

HI HONOLULU — Mid-Pacific Institute will become the first school in Hawaii to begin testing students for drug use when a voluntary, confidential program begins next fall at the private school in Manoa.

The administration mailed letters announcing the program to parents and posted information on the school's Web site about 1,170 students in grades six through 12 would be eligible for testing.

A student and his or her parents must agree the student should be subjected to the random tests, said school president Joe Rice. Parents, not the school, will be informed of results of the urine tests, he said.

The program is intended to "gently force a discussion between parents and students," said school president Joe Rice. Parents, not the school, will be informed of results of the urine tests, he said.

Playground memorial

IN CROTHERSVILLE — A school playground with equipment resembling a small castle and treeshouse will serve as a memorial for a 10-year-old girl who was abducted and drowned after happening upon people making methamphetamine.

The plans for the new playground were announced at Crothersville Community School after designers spent the day talking with students about their ideas for the memorial for Katlyn "Katie" Collman.

The fifth-grader was abducted Jan. 25 while returning home in the town about 40 miles north of Louisville, Ky., after running an errand. Her body was found five days later, in a creek north of Seymour.

Charles Hickman, 20, has been charged with murder and criminal confinement.

Mercury, now retrograde, plays a trick or two before the day is out. It's as if the universe has handed out a pop quiz titled: How Organized Are You, Really? If you've set up a system that involves others, just be sure they understand it, too. The results of communication are precarious at best, but this improves when you write things down.

Holiday Mathis

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (March 21). You have a knack for knowing which is the most fruitful action to take, so you get what you want quickly this year! On your road to success, it's lucky to bring along your friends every way you can. You'll be hitting, inviting and inspiring those close to you. Cancer and Sagittarius are wonderful partners for romance. The best time to travel is May.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). A house is only as sturdy as its foundation. A car is only as fast as its engine. And you are only as effective as your mind. On this day filled with distractions, mentally imagine yourself winning, and then, continue on.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). A test situation is not real life, but it's a solid indicator of how real life will go down when you're in the heat of the fire. Create a drill to thoroughly prepare yourself for an upcoming stressful situation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). There's a raw and gritty feeling about all you witness today. Other air signs help you avoid getting sucked into a "downer" mood. The naked truth doesn't have to be sad — it can also make you laugh out loud.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Opportunities only arise when you consciously put yourself in line for them. So buy your ticket, and step right up. Love is complicated enough. Finding potential partners should be the easy part.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Romance is only one kind of love. Platonic affection, admiration for a mentor, familial connection and spiritual bonds are also sources of great fulfillment. Let love in its many forms lift you higher.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You consider a situation, territory or person to be yours. But much that we lay claim to cannot be owned. Realize this, act accordingly, and you are fantastically lucky.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It feels like you're sneaking around in order to avoid hurting someone's feelings. Trust your instincts on this one, although down deep, you know you've got a right to love whomever you choose.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You've got it all over the competition, and you know it. Don't gloat! There is still room for improvement. Keep a private journal of your strengths and all the ways you're different from your rival.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The tumultuous emotions in the air affect you for sure. But staying in a good mood is not rocket science. Spending time with someone sunny still puts a smile on your face.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You need to build your self-esteem more than you need to accomplish heavy work. Make success an easy and doable process! Break projects down into smaller tasks. You're trying to do too much too fast.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The best opportunities are once removed from your immediate resources: Contacts made through your children's friends, your friends' friends and your colleagues' friends are the luckiest.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Negotiations are featured. You are up against an operator who is much smoother than appearances suggest. (Think Monk or Columbo!) Don't put anything on the table unless you're willing to lose it.

NCAA tournament: Austin Regional

Saturday night's NCAA tournament game between unfriendly neighbors Kentucky and Cincinnati took an emotional toll on coaches as well as players. Kentucky's Tubby Smith signals to his team while, at right, Cincinnati's Bob Huggins can't believe a call made by an official. Kentucky beat Cincinnati 69-60 to advance to the NCAA tournament's round of 16.

Kentucky wins a border squabble

BY MICHAEL MAROT
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Cincinnati still is playing the little brother to neighboring Kentucky. The Wildcats just keep beating them up.

Second-seeded Kentucky led on three-point shooting to get started, then strong-armed the underseeded Bearcats inside and finally wore them down late to pull away with a 69-60 second-round victory Saturday in the NCAA tournament's Austin Regional.

"They try to put a lot of pressure on you," said Kelenna Azubuike, who led Kentucky with 19 points. "The way to beat that is be aggressive and fight the pressure, not back down."

The bitterness between schools located about 90 miles apart has which they play. There have been just six games since 1948; Kentucky has won 15 straight in the series dating to 1939.

Saturday's victory meant even more, though. The Wildcats (27-5) avoided a second straight second-round upset and a third straight elimination by a Conference USA school, and now face sixth-seeded Utah, 67-58 winner over Oklahoma.

Cincinnati still winless since '39 as Wildcats use interior strength

Kentucky won this one by dominating the middle.

Chuck Hayes finished with 10 points and eight rebounds and freshman Randolph Morris produced the first double-double of his career with 11 points and 12 rebounds. Azubuike had nine rebounds and another freshman, Rajon Rondo, added 16 points.

The Wildcats outscored Cincinnati 34-12 inside. "Randolph, late, was grabbing every rebound," Hayes said. "He was becoming a presence down there in the paint."

The game even had the elements of a family feud.

A crowd of 40,331 set the one-session record for an NCAA subregional site, breaking the previous mark of 39,940 set in Indianapolis in 1990. Most of the fans were clad in Kentucky blue or Illinois orange, but as the second game started, pockets of Cincinnati red also appeared.

Fans interrupted each other's chants and one held a sign that read "Real Cats Wear Blue and White, not Black and Red." Kentucky fans even booed the Bearcats' cheerleaders as they led the team onto the floor.

On the court, emotions were stronger. Cincinnati's James White had an angry expression on his face during warmups and Kentucky players were chest bumping before introductions.

The coaches got involved, too. Cincinnati's Bob Huggins worked the officials hard, and Kentucky's Tubby Smith repeatedly stomped the floor and walked onto the court to make points.

It was that kind of day — and that kind of game.

Utah 67, Oklahoma 58: Andrew Bogut makes everyone around him better, and his Utah teammates were at their best Saturday.

The sixth-seeded Utes capitalized on the 7-foot Aussie's skilled passing and Justin Hawkins' 20 points to beat the third-seeded Sooners.

N.C. State ends UConn's repeat hopes

BY JOHN KERIS
The Associated Press

WORCESTER, Mass. — Julius Hodge shouted to his fans at the buzzer, saying he knew this would happen all along: North Carolina State was heading to the round of 16, and the defending champion was knocked out — again.

Hodge scored on a slashing drive through the lane with 4.3 seconds left to break a 62-all tie and send North Carolina State past second-seeded Connecticut 65-62 on Sunday in the second round of the NCAA tournament.

North Carolina State (21-13), the 10th seed in the Syracuse Regional, advances to the regional semifinals for the first time since 1987 and will play the winner of the Bucknell-Wisconsin second-round game.

No team has repeated since Duke in 1992, but the defending national champion Huskies (23-8) seemed almost a lock to at least move past the second round. Connecticut went into the game 27-0 against teams seeded sixth or lower in the tournament. And in 19 years under coach Jim Calhoun, it was 23-2 in the first two rounds of the tournament, reaching the regional semifinals 13 times.

The loss also was a setback for the Big East Conference, which has lost one No. 2 seeds and two No. 4 seeds so far.

Hodge, who yelled, "I told you! I told you!" to Wolfpack fans after the buzzer sounded, was fouled by Ed Nelson on his drive and completed the three-point play. When Marcus Williams' desperation three-point attempt at the buzzer fell short, the Wolfpack had its biggest victory in 16 years.

Hodge finished with 17 points and six assists, Cameron Binnerman had his second straight solid game with 15 points, Iliyan Ertyov had 11 before fouling out with 2:16 left, and Andrew Brackman had 10 points.

Williams led the Huskies with a career-high 22 points and Charlie Villanueva had 16 points and 12 rebounds. Freshman Rudy Gay, who was averaging 12 points, had early foul trouble and finished with only four points. Long-range ace Rashad Anderson made only one of five three-point attempts and finished with five points, and Josh Boone had four.

N.C. State's deliberate offense thwarted the Huskies from running their uptempo game. Connecticut was unable to connect from the outside — it was 2-for-14 on three-pointers, both of the makes coming in the first half — so it was in trouble when Binnerman hit a three-pointer to give the Wolfpack a 56-45 lead with 5:10 left.

Connecticut had plenty of fight left. Nelson hit a jumper in the one, and Villanueva's three-point play with 3:49 left cut it to 57-52.

Williams, playing on a tender ankle injured in the first-round victory over Central Florida, then fed Boone for an alley-oop dunk and it was 57-54 with 2:56 left.

Hodge took advantage of a screen by Jordan Collins and scored on a layup at 1:52. Nelson hit two free throws, the second after a lane violation by N.C. State, to narrow the Wolfpack's lead to 59-58 just six seconds later, and a layup by Villanueva cut it to 62 with 15.8 seconds left.

Wis.-Milwaukee strikes again

After second upset, Panthers head to Sweet 16 matchup with Illinois

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Bruce Pearl's eyes welled up and his throat tightened the moment he heard Boston College's fight song. Nothing makes him cry quicker than "For Boston."

A few hours later, Wisconsin-Milwaukee's coach, who once stuffed himself inside BC's mascot suit for a game, clapped his hands to another sentimental tune — one without a title.

"It's just called the UWM fight song," said a Milwaukee basketball member, showing the sheet music.

On Saturday, they were singing it from Madison to Menomonee Falls.

Joah Tucker scored 23 points, Ed McCants had 18 and Adrian Tinger 16 as the 12th-seeded Panthers sprung their second NCAA tournament upset in three days, an 83-75 victory over Boston College in the second round Saturday.

Given little chance in the opening round against Alabama from the Southeastern Conference or against the Big East's regular-season champion, Milwaukee (26-5) gave the nation's mid-major programs another moment to savor this March.

"We're going to the Sweet 16," Tucker said after the Panthers pranced around the floor. "We've got a name to put on this win."

They did it the way they know best: with a relentless, full-court press that confounded the Eagles (25-5), forcing them into 22 turnovers — the most crucial one a pass that was thrown away with 1:21 remaining and BC down 76-77.

"I thought we would handle it better," Eagles coach Al Skinner said. "They attacked us, stayed aggressive and didn't stop."

NCAA tournament: Albuquerque Regional

Washington shows why it's a No. 1 seed

The Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — Washington is making it a lot harder to question its No. 1 seed in the Albuquerque Regional.

The Huskies advanced to the round of 16 for the first time since 1998 with a convincing 97-79 victory over Pacific on Saturday.

Nate Robinson scored 18 of his 23 points in the second half, but Jerry Jones scored 19 and Will Conroy had 10 assists for Washington (29-5).

The Simmons scored 15 for the Pac-10 champion Huskies, whose top seed was the most disputed among the four No. 1s. But Washington backed it up well against Pacific.

The Panthers, who have won 11 straight and 19 of 20, weren't intimidated by some early trash talk from Boston College and overcame foul trouble in the second half to advance to next week's round of 16.

Milwaukee will play Illinois on Thursday in the Chicago Regional in Rosemont, Ill. The Panthers are the fifth No. 12 seed to advance to the final 16 since 1989 and the first since Butler, their Horizon league brethren, in 2003.

After the final seconds ticked off, Pearl, a BC grad and assistant at Chestnut Hill who landed a gig as eagle for the day in a 1981 tournament game, swung his 10-year-old daughter, Leah, around at midcourt.

Nearby, the Panthers, who by game's end had won over 90 percent of the Wolstein Center crowd with their inspired play, high-fived and hugged after trumping the win over Alabama with an even bigger one.

Now they'll have a chance to knock off the Fighting Illini — a No. 1 seed and the nation's consensus No. 1 team.

"We have at least 24 hours to celebrate," said McCants, the Horizon's Player of the Year. "We understand we still have games to be played. There won't be any ridiculous amount of celebrating. It'll be back to business when we get back to Milwaukee."

Arizona 71, Nevada 59: At Indianapolis, James Augustine scored a career-high 23 points and Jack Ingram added 12 in the top-seeded Illini's victory. Augustine also had 10 rebounds, four blocked shots and two steals.

Illinois' famed guard trio of Deron Williams, Dee Brown and Luther Head combined for 31 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists as the big guys took center stage. Williams scored five points on free throws down the stretch.

The Huskies never trailed and pulled away by going 19-for-31 (61 percent) from the field in the second half. They finished shooting 56.3 percent (36-for-64) for the game. Next up is the winner of Louisville-Georgia Tech Thursday's regional semifinal.

Other than a brief push by eighth-seeded Pacific (27-4) midway through the second half, the Huskies dominated and answered their doubters after holding on to Montana 88-77 in the opening round.

Guillaume Yango led Pacific with 17 points and 10 rebounds and Christian Marward added 12 points for the Tigers, but the Swedish forward was shut out in the second half.

Wisconsin-Milwaukee's Derrick Ford (50) and Jason McCoy (21) knock the ball away from Boston College's Jared Dudley in the second half Saturday in Cleveland. No. 12 seed Wisconsin-Milwaukee scored its second upset in three days by defeating fourth-seeded BC 83-75.

The Illini (34-1) reached the regional semifinals for the second straight season and fourth time in the last five seasons.

Kevin Pinkney led the Wolf Pack (25-7) with 22 points and 11 rebounds. Mo Charlo added 12.

Arizona 85, UAB 63: At Boise, Idaho, Salim Stoudamire made five three-pointers and had 28 points, and Arizona didn't buckle under Alabama-Birmingham's constant pressure defense.

Arizona (29-6) struggled with UAB's frenetic, trapping defense in the first half, but had only four turnovers in the second to reach the round of 16 for the 12th time.

The Wildcats, the 1997 national champions, advanced to Rosemont, Ill., next weekend and will face Oklahoma State or Southern Illinois, which play Sunday in Oklahoma City.

Donell Taylor scored 13 points for the Blazers (22-11).

Gansley. Yet another big finish for W. Va.

GANSELY, FROM BACK PAGE

The burden appeared to weigh on them in their 70-54 victory over Chattanooga on Thursday. Several players conceded they felt some opening-game jitters.

"This time, they couldn't hold onto a 13-point halftime lead or hold off a team that has made its mark by knocking off Top 25 teams. West Virginia tore through the Big East tournament to reach the final, developing a knack for big finishes.

None was bigger than this one. "I just hope we have a city when we get back to school," said Mountaineers guard J.D. Collins. "It might get burned down."

Gansley, who had about 300 friends and relatives in the stands, made a free throw that tied it at 77 with 21 seconds left in regulation.

He was just getting started. The frenetic pace stretched into overtime, with neither team ahead by more than a couple of baskets. It was tied at 93 when Wake Forest center Eric Williams blocked Johannes Herber's driving layup with 2 seconds to go at the end of the first overtime.

Paul scored 10 points in the first overtime, helping Wake Forest keep up with Gansley, who had 10 in the first overtime and nine more in the second, capping a comeback that will live in West Virginia lore.

"We were down, it's the story of our season," said West Virginia coach John Beilein. "We didn't quit."

They were in trouble at halftime, trailing 40-27 with no idea how to contain the Demon Deacons' punishing inside game. Williams finished with 23 points and 12 rebounds.

Wake Forest extended its defense to contain the Mountaineers' shooters, who set a school record for three-pointers this season.

Instead, West Virginia started taking the ball inside and scoring at will, and the Demon Deacons lost their grip on the game.

"We were just trying to guard the three-point line," forward Jamar Levy said. "We guarded them in the first half, but in the second half they started being aggressive and taking it to the basket. We couldn't stop them."

West Virginia started holding its own inside and D'Or Fischer, the star of the tournament's 2001 play-in game, momentarily took the stage again, turning it into a game.

Fischer, who blocked nine shots in Northwestern State's play-in victory and later transferred to West Virginia, started a three-point play, a dunk and a block during a 10-3 spurt that cut it to 54-51 midway through the second half and set up the dramatic finish.

It finally ended when Wake Forest's Trent Strickland missed a three-pointer with 29 seconds left in the game and Herber's fastbreak layup sealed it with 13 seconds to go.

Tennessee takes down another favorite from Carolina

The Associated Press

DALLAS — After tournament upsets in consecutive seasons, Middle Tennessee is no longer content with being a spoiler.

"Getting any win in the NCAAs is great," guard Patrice Holmes said. "Now, hopefully, we can get to the Sweet 16 this time."

It certainly seems possible for the No. 12 seed, which notched another first-round upset Saturday night with a 60-58 victory over fifth-seeded North Carolina State in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Last season, the Lady Raiders were a No. 13 seed when they knocked off fourth-seeded North Carolina 67-62.

It was Holmes who sent Middle Tennessee (24-8) to the second round, hitting the game-winning jumper with 1.6 seconds left.

Holmes set a screen before finding herself open near the top of the key, letting the ball go almost immediately after it touched her hands.

Middle Tennessee players and a few fans rushed onto the court after the final buzzer, celebrating the fourth NCAA tournament victory in school history.

Holmes, a senior who has started all 123 games in her career, finished with 26 points on 11-for-18 shooting.

Holmes' heroics came after N.C. State had tied the game with 26.6 seconds remaining on a basket by Tiffany Stanbury, who led the Wolfpack with 16 points and 10 rebounds.

The loss ended an emotional year for N.C. State coach Jay Yow, who in January began treatment for a recurrence of breast cancer. She was forced to skip two games, her first absences in 30 years of coaching.

"We knew what Middle Tennessee was capable of," Yow said. "This team beat North Carolina in the first round last year, so we had that knowledge and it was an advantage to us. We knew it would be a tough game."

N.C. State (21-8) played most of the game without leading scorer Billie McDowell, whose left knee buckled as she planted her leg for a jumper with 11:57 left in the first half. She writhed on the floor for several minutes and was taken in the locker room for the rest of the game.

X-rays revealed no breaks, but McDowell was to undergo an MRI on Sunday.

Texas Tech 69, Texas A&M 49: At Dallas, LaToya Davis had a career-high 26 points and added 14 rebounds to lead the fourth-seeded Red Raiders (23-7) to their 14th straight first-round victory.

Texas A&M barely gets by DePaul

The Associated Press

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Bobby Leach scored 23 points and Texas A&M nearly squandered a 20-point lead before holding on to beat DePaul 75-72 Saturday in the second round of the NIT.

Leach gave the Aggies a 73-68 lead with 21.6 seconds left when he made two free throws after a technical foul on DePaul when Blue Demons' guard LeVar Seals called for a timeout when the Blue Demons had none left.

Antonio Wright had 19 points and Joseph Jones 14 for the Aggies (21-9), while Leach had 13 points in the second half. A&M won despite missing five free throws and Quwanon Greer added 20 for DePaul (20-11).

Sammy Mejia scored 23 and Quwanon Greer added 20 for DePaul (20-11).

Memphis 83, Virginia Tech 62: At Memphis, Tinn, Rodney Carney scored 17 points, leading five Memphis players in double figures as the Tigers advanced to the third round.

Anthony Rice added 16 and Jeremy Hunt scored 15 for the Tigers (21-15), who held a double-digit lead throughout the second half.

Darius Washington had 14 points and five assists.

Jamon Gordon scored 16 points to lead the Hoopes (16-14) while Carlos Dixon scored 13.

Wichita State 84, Western Kentucky 81: At Wichita, Kan., Jamar Howard scored 22 points to lead Wichita State in the first-round game.

Paul Miller added 18 for the Shockers (22-9), while PJ Cousins scored 13 and Randy Burns had 12.

Anthony Winchester had 25 for the Hilltoppers (22-9). Courtney Lee had 16, and Anthony Haynes added 15.

Saint Joseph's 55, Buffalo 50: At Philadelphia, Pat Carroll scored 26 points and hit key baskets down the stretch to lift Saint Joseph's to the victory in the first-round game.

The victory gave St. Joseph's coach Phil Martelli 200 career victories. St. Joe's next play will host to Holy Cross.

Carroll finished 10-for-18 from the floor and 4-for-9 from three-point range. He hit his first three shots from the floor, including two dunks, to lift St. Joe's to an early seventh-place lead.

Davidson 82, SW Missouri State 71: At Springfield, Mo., Brendan Winters scored 22 points to lead Davidson in a first-round game.

Winters had 6-for-8 from three-point range, and Jason Morro added 19 points for Davidson (23-8), which will play at Maryland on Wednesday night.

Duke Thompson led Southwest Missouri (19-13) with 15 points, Anthony Shavies had 14 and Kellen Eaves 13.

Morales wins bloody brawl

By TIM DAHLBERG
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Manny Pacquiao fought desperately as blood flowed from a bad cut over his right eye. Against another fighter it may have been enough, but Erik Morales was not just another fighter.

Morales, fighting with the cool precision of a champion who has been there many times before, got the better of Pacquiao with jabs and big right hands Saturday night to win a close but unanimous decision in their 130-pound showdown.

No title was at stake, but there was plenty of national pride.

Pacquiao is a national hero in the Philippines, Morales is revered in Mexico, and between the two they drew a sellout crowd of 14,623 to the MGM Grand hotel to see them brawl.

They didn't disappoint, going each other from the opening bell in a fight that grew in intensity after Pacquiao was cut in the fifth round when hit with a right hand and the two clashed heads.

Though blood flowed in his eye, Pacquiao fought gallantly and the fighters went toe to toe in a frenetic 12th round that had the crowd standing and cheering.

All three judges had Morales the winner, but not by much. He won 115-113 on the ringside scorecards, while The Associated Press had Morales ahead 116-112.

"He was a tough guy. I hit him with everything," Morales said. "I knew the guy was quick. I knew boxing would be the key because he was so fast."

It was the first fight at 130 pounds for Pacquiao, and Morales appeared to be the bigger fighter and the bigger puncher.

Pacquiao fought inside with flurries, but it was the right hand of Morales (48-2) that was the big punch in the fight.

Still, Pacquiao landed effectively with both hands and kept punching and coming forward and in the 12th round seemed to be landing the bigger punches.

"It was a close fight with a lot of close rounds," Pacquiao's trainer,

Freddie Roach, said. "Morales landed the bigger punches but Manny landed more combinations."

Pacquiao blamed the loss on having to wear different type of gloves than he usually uses. He wore them because his promoter, Murad Muhammad, signed a deal for his fighter to wear them.

Neither fighter went down, but it wasn't for lack of effort. They brought a relentless pace that brought back memories of Morales' three fights with Marco Antonio Barrera.

"I tried my best," Pacquiao said. Pacquiao (39-3-2) came into the ring with the weight of his country on his slight shoulders. Some 30 million people in the Philippines were expected to watch the fight on live television.

In another fight on the card, Martin Castillo of Mexico retained his WBA 115-pound title with a unanimous decision over Eric Morel (35-2) of Puerto Rico. Castillo (28-1) led 119-109 on all three scorecards in his second title defense.

Erik Morales of Mexico, right, rocks Manny Pacquiao of the Philippines with a right hand in their super featherweight bout on Saturday night.

Consolidator's San Felipe romp gives Lukas a Derby contender

The Associated Press

ARCADIA, Calif. — Consolidator was a record-setting winner of the $250,000 San Felipe Stakes on Saturday, giving trainer D. Wayne Lukas a top Kentucky Derby hopeful.

Consolidator, fourth in the San Vicente in his last start at Santa Anita, was ready for this race. The colt owned by Bob and Beverly Lewis won the 1 1/2-mile race in 1:40.11 — a full second faster than the previous mark set by Pole Position in 1979. His 6 1/2-length margin of victory over Giacomo also was a stakes record.

Wilko, the Breeders' Cup Juvenile winner, finished fourth in the eight-horse field, with Bob Baffert's Roman Ruler last in his first start since finishing fifth in the BC Juvenile on Oct. 30.

Consolidator will run next in either the Santa Anita Derby on April 9 or the Blue Grass Stakes at Lexington, Ky., a week later.

Consolidator, ridden by Rafael Bejarano, paid $16,400, $6,800 and $4.20.

Rebel Stakes

Contenders fade at Oakland: At Hot Springs, Ark., Alton Alex faded badly in the stretch and Rockport Harbor couldn't hold the lead. That allowed Greater Good ($11,200) to storm past both for a half-length victory in the $250,000 Rebel Stakes at Oakland Park on Saturday.

The surprising result in the Kentucky Derby prep race raised that won the Derby and Preakness last year with Smarty Jones.

Survivalist charges to victory in the Gotham Stakes at Aqueduct.

Greater Good, ridden by John McKee, won for the fifth time in seven career starts and is 2-for-2 this year. Greater Good covered 1 1/2 miles in 1:44.92.

Tampa Bay Derby

Favorite easy winner in Tampa: At Oldsmar, Fla., Sun King ($2,100) pulled away in the stretch and easily won the $250,000 Tampa Bay Derby, solidifying his status as a Derby contender.

Trained by Nick Zito, Sun King improved to 2-for-2 this year by seizing control of the 1 1/2-mile race right from the start.

The winning time was 1:43.98, just off the track record of 1:43.40. Next stop for Sun King is the Blue Grass at Keeneland on April 16.

Gotham Stakes

Zero's horse wins Gotham: At New York, Survivalist ($8,900) lived up to his name and won the Gotham Stakes at Aqueduct, sweeping past the field in the final strides and withstanding a steward's inquiry.

Pavo, who finished second in a gallant effort, was disqualified to fourth after stewards ruled that the colt's jockey, Alan Garcia, inadvertently whipped Naughtly New Yorker in the face during a wild stretch run. Garcia somehow managed to slide most of the race with his feet out of the stirrups.

Survivalist, Galloping Grocer and Naughtly New Yorker are expected to run in the Wood Memorial on April 9, a final prep before the Kentucky Derby.

The winning time for the one-turn mile was 1:35.61.

Perry builds 3-shot lead in Bay Hill Invitational

The Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Kenny Perry was worried his 44-year-old body might be a little stiff after playing 29 holes. He found nothing had changed Sunday morning, finishing the third round with a 4-under 68 that gave him a three-shot lead over Vijay Singh in the Bay Hill Invitational.

Perry continued to drive it long and straight, including a 306-yard tee shot on the par-5 16th that left him only a 5-iron into the green for a two-putt birdie that extended his lead.

He was at 10-under 206 and had the 54-hole lead for the first time since the Greater Milwaukee Open two years ago, when Perry was winning just about every time he played. He looks like he's about to enter one of those hot streaks, which might make it tough on Singh and the rest of the field at Bay Hill.

"My swing is in order," Perry said. "I felt good. I didn't feel stiff and sore like I was worried about."

Singh had to scramble for par on the easy 16th, and save par from a bunker on the 18th to complete a 69 and remain at 7-under 209. K.J. Choi (70) and Stephen Ames (71) were another shot behind.

Golf roundup

Singh came from behind for his only victory this year at the Sony Open. Even if he doesn't catch Perry, Singh was in excellent shape to return to No. 1 in the world.

Selig: baseball didn't know about possible steroid use 10 years ago

The Associated Press

MESA, Ariz. — Commissioner Bud Selig rejected the notion that baseball officials knew steroids were a problem 10 years ago but did nothing about it.

"It's easy to look back and re-write history," Selig said Saturday. "People can say that we knew, but I'd like to know on what basis. There certainly is no medical evidence. There was no testing."

Speaking during a spring training game between the Milwaukee Brewers and Chicago Cubs, Selig also dismissed the theory that owners looked the other way on steroids because they were happy with the home run boom in the late 1990s.

"I never had an owner say to me, 'I like what you're doing, commissioner. These home runs are helping us.' All this business about you should have known or you could have known, I take very seriously, but the programs have kicked in, and we're going to have to do whatever we have to do to eradicate steroids from our sport," Selig said.

"It's not like we've ignored the problem. You can't minimize the health risk. Nobody is taking this lightly."

Spring training

Selig admitted that he wished he "knew in 1995 what I know now," but also defended baseball's current drug-testing policy.

The sport banned steroids in September 2002 and began testing for them with penalties in 2004.

Under a new agreement this off-season, players are tested randomly and a first offense is subject to a 10-day suspension or a fine.

"What is the objective here in the end?" Selig said. "The objective is to eradicate steroids from baseball. That's the objective. If these programs do that, isn't that what we're supposed to have done? I'm not going to rest until we eradicate steroids. Whatever it takes to get that done, that's what we're going to do."

Selig and other baseball officials testified Thursday at a congressional hearing on steroids, along with past and present sluggers such as Mark McGwire, Sammy Sosa and Rafael Palmeiro.

The commissioner said he was surprised that congress got involved so soon after baseball implemented its new testing program on March 3.

"Everybody was sort of patting us on the back," Selig said.

"Now we test year-round, random tests, multiple tests, all the things people had complained about. Am I a little surprised that the new program wasn't at least allowed to work a little bit? We didn't start testing until the 3rd of March. The new program is in force."

"Would I like tougher penalties? I would. They asked me about federal legislation. That is something baseball would not object to. This is a subject of collective bargaining. This is the program that we have. At least it's working," he said.

The commissioner said he wasn't sure how baseball fared in the court of public opinion during the congressional hearing.

"It's hard for me to assess," Selig said. "Nobody worries more about the image of the sport than I do. I'm proud of our players."

Alonso gives Renault second F1 win of season

The Associated Press

SEMPANG, Malaysia — Fernando Alonso won the Malaysian Grand Prix on Sunday to give Renault victories in the first two races of the Formula One season. Jarno Trulli was the runner-up for Toyota's first top-three finish.

Alonso's teammate, Giancarlo Fisichella, crashed, taking Williams' Mark Webber with him, and seven-time F1 champion Michael Schumacher earned his first points of 2005 with a seventh-place finish for Ferrari.

Alonso, third in the season-opening Australian Grand Prix behind Fisichella and Ferrari's Rubens Barrichello two weeks ago, dominated from the pole position for his second GP title.

He covered 56 laps of the 1.345-mile Sepang circuit in 1 hour, 31 minutes, 33.736 seconds — 24.3 seconds ahead of Trulli and 22.1 ahead of Williams' Nick Heidfeld, who moved up from 10th place on the starting grid.

Renault leads the constructors' championship with 26 points and Alonso has 16 points in the drivers' standings, six ahead of Fisichella. Alonso is the first Spaniard to lead the Formula One driver standings.

"It's a fantastic feeling," Alonso said. "The world champion in Formula One is a dream for a young driver."

Racing roundup

Edwards earns first Busch victory in Aaron's 312

HAMPTON, Va. — Carl Edwards is trying to speed up his learning curve by racing in two grueling series at the same time.

So far, his busy schedule is working out just fine.

Edwards raced to his first NASCAR Busch Series victory Saturday, holding off several Nextel Cup stars in the Aaron's 312 at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

Afterward, he came to a stop in front of the main grandstand, climbed out of his Ford and performed a trademark backflip onto the asphalt, delighting the crowd.

Edwards, who spent most of 2004 in the truck series, moved up to Roush Racing's Nextel Cup team late in the season. He showed plenty of promise with five top-five finishes in 13 races.

This year, the 25-year-old Missouri driver is running a full schedule in Busch and Nextel Cup, accelerating his experience level in stock cars.

Clearly, he's not bothered by the hectic pace. Edwards is fifth in the Nextel Cup standings, and Saturday's victory pushed him to the lead in the Busch Series.

U.S. tops Honduras

The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Eddie Jones scored late in the first half for his seventh goal in six games with the national team, and the United States beat Honduras 4-0 on Saturday.

Goalkeeper Kevin Hartman preserved the shutout when he smothered a kick from Wilmer Velazquez from in front of the goal in the 88th minute.

U.S. next plays Mexico on March 27.

Indy Racing League teammates Sam Hornish Jr. (6) and Helio Castroneves run side-by-side on lap 126 of the XM Satellite Indy 200 Saturday at Phoenix International Raceway, in Avondale, Ariz.

Hornish reaches Victory Lane for first time since '04 opener

By MIKE HARRIS

The Associated Press

AVONDALE, Ariz. — Suddenly, Sam Hornish Jr. is back.

After a frustrating first season with Team Penske, two-time Indy Racing League champion Hornish is back in Victory Lane and back on top of the IndyCar Series standings.

After finishing second in the season-opening race two weeks ago at Homestead, Hornish backed it up Saturday with a hard-earned victory in the XM Satellite Radio Indy 200 at Phoenix International Raceway.

"Really, it's been a tough road over the last year," said Hornish, whose only other victory with the Penske team came in the 2004 season opener at Homestead. "Every time we thought we were turning the corner, something else happened. This start has been a real pleasant surprise."

"Last year, I thought there were a lot of times when we could have done something and I either left a little bit on the table or pushed too hard. What we set out to do this year is be real consistent and finish every lap, and that's what we've done so far."

Another typical IRL photo finish appeared to be shaping up with two laps to go Saturday before Dario Franchitti gambled and lost.

With Hornish holding a narrow lead over Franchitti after the last of four caution flags in the 200-lap event, the Scotsman tried an outside move on the restart on lap 199 and wound up sliding up the slick one-mile oval and scraping the concrete wall in turn two.

Hornish raced on to his 13th career victory, beating teammate Helio Castroneves to the finish line by 1.04 seconds — about half the final straightaway.

"We threw the dice," Franchitti said, shrugging. "I had to make a move soon and understeered right up into the wall. Sam was just perfect on the restart. He did nothing wrong."

"[Outside] was the only place to go. Sam went low and I wanted to go high and that was the result."

Hornish, who seemed more relieved than excited about his fast start, said, "After I saw what happened to Dario, I knew that I couldn't make any mistakes because Helio was still there behind me. But I knew Dario was my biggest competition and that Helio and I have been pretty evenly matched so far this season."

"It was a heck of a battle, in my opinion, between Dario, Helio and I from about halfway on."

All three of the contenders knew they had to make fuel stops in the final 25 laps and Franchitti was the first to do so, giving up the lead to Hornish when he pitted for tires and fuel on lap 179.

The Penske drivers stayed on track longer, both making fuel-only stops, with Hornish pitting on lap 187 and Castroneves making his stop on lap 190.

Franchitti, part of the powerful four-car Andretti Green Racing team that also fields entries for reigning series champ Tony Kanaan, Homestead winner Dan Wheldon and Phoenix pole winner Bryan Herta, found himself second to Hornish when Tomas Scheckter bounced off the wall and brought out the final caution flag on lap 193.

McCain: MLB 'can't be trusted' on steroids

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Saying Major League Baseball "can't be trusted," Sen. John McCain warned Sunday that legislation might be needed to force the sport to change its steroids policy.

The Arizona Republican joined the chorus of congressmen expressing disappointment with baseball's drug-testing plan after testimony from Commissioner Bud Selig and union head Donald Fehr before the House Government Reform Committee hearing on Thursday.

"It just seems to me they can't be trusted," McCain told ABC's "This Week."

"What do we need to do? It seems to me that we ought to seriously consider ... a law that says all professional sports have a minimum amount of performance-enhancing drug testing," McCain said.

Sports briefs

Committee chairman Tom Davis, R-Va., said on CBS "Face the Nation" that he agreed with McCain's suggestion that the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency could be called in to govern baseball's testing.

The independent agency oversees drug testing and discipline for U.S. Olympic athletes.

Davis, whose committee subpoenaed current and former stars and baseball executives to testify Thursday, said he's willing to wait and see how Major League Baseball handles drug testing and punishment in 2005.

"They've got this season. We'll see how they respond when they find someone testing positive," Davis told CBS.

Clijsters wins title; Federer, Hewitt advance to final

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. — Former No. 1 Kim Clijsters defeated top-ranked Lindsay Davenport on Saturday to win her second Pacific Life Open title in three years.

Clijsters, who withdrew during last year's tournament with a wrist injury and missed most of the year, defeated Davenport 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

The top two men's players in the world moved into their final.

Lleyton Hewitt ousted Andy Roddick in a match that went to three tiebreakers, and defending champion Roger Federer continued his dominating run with a quick victory over Guillermo Canas.

Hewitt edged Roddick 7-6 (2), 6-7 (3), 7-6 (4) in a well-played, entertaining night match that lasted 2 hours, 35 minutes. Federer needed just 1:13 to beat Canas.

Pairings announced for NCAA hockey tournament

NORTLAND, Maine — The University of Maine will play against Minnesota in the first round of the NCAA hockey tournament after receiving a No. 4 seed in Sunday's selection announcement.

The Black Bears (20-12-7) will be forced to play on the Gophers' home ice at Marquette Arena in Minneapolis next Saturday in the West region.

The winner of that game will take on the winner Ohio State-Cornell game. Minnesota (26-14-1) is the top-ranked team in the West region.

Maine and Minnesota met in the national championship game in 2002, with Minnesota coming out on top, 4-3, in overtime.

Coaches guides mavs to victory after Nelson resigns as coach

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki scored plenty of points as usual. The four-time All-Star is also going to have to play consistent defense now that the Dallas Mavericks are Avery Johnson's team for good.

After Nowitzki scored 20 of his 33 points by halftime, he was benched for a possession 20 seconds into the second half after not executing a defensive play to the satisfaction of Johnson.

"I had him yanked out of there because I wasn't pleased with his defense," Johnson said.

It was a tough first game for Johnson even though the Mavericks beat Charlotte 104-93 Saturday night.

Still, it was special for Johnson, the protégé who took over the job when Don Nelson resigned earlier in the day. Johnson planned to give the game his team the man replaced.

While the Mavericks outbounded Charlotte 49-33, the Mavericks struggled on the defensive side as Johnson stresses so much. Nowitzki allowing a long jumper by 7-foot-1 Primož Brezec was just one example of many times Johnson cringed courtside.

Nelson wasn't likely to put Nowitzki on the bench for something like that. Johnson did quickly. "I didn't do my job on defense. I let my guy get the ball too deep. That's a message he sent to me and everybody," Nowitzki said. "I came back in and did a better job. We all got to take that message."

Nelson, who remains a team consultant, was never far away. He watched much of his first game in the new role from an empty seat on press row.

The second-winning coach in NBA history was recognized before the game, waving to the crowd from just behind the scorer's table at midcourt. He watched the first quarter from the nearby tunnel, seemingly trying to stay out of view before moving to center.

Dirk Nowitzki, seemingly trying to stay out of view before moving to center.

Nelson finished with a career record of 1,190-880 over 27 seasons, including stints with Milwaukee, Golden State and the New York Knicks. He went 339-251 in eight seasons with Dallas, best in franchise history.

Heat 97, Knicks 82: At Miami, Shaquille O'Neal scored 33 points and Dwyane Wade had 30 to lead the Heat to their 12th straight victory.

O'Neal also grabbed 17 rebounds as Miami won its 15th straight at home and swept the four-game season series with New York for the first time in franchise history.

O'Neal and Wade became the first Heat duo to score 30 apiece in a game since Glen Rice and Khalid Reeves in 1995 against Philadelphia.

Wizards 96, Jazz 95: At Washington, Gilbert Arenas rallied from a scoreless first half with 22 points in the second, including two free throws with 2.3 seconds to play.

After Raja Bell hit a fadeaway 18-footer for Utah with 18 seconds left, Arenas dribbled down the clock for the final shot and was fouled by Bell while driving the lane. Arenas made the free throws, and Heat's Jeremy Miller missed a contested 16-footer to the buzzer to send the Jazz to their ninth straight loss.

Larry Hughes scored 21 points for the Wizards.

Howard leads Ansbach comeback in title game

BY RUSTY BRYAN
Stars and Stripes

WÜRZBURG, Germany — Down by 14 points with just over 15 minutes to play, the Ansbach Lady Cougars decided it was time to get busy in their Army-Europe women's championship game against the Kitzingen Lady Rattlers. So they put the game in the hands of former All-Amy performer Elsa Howard.

Howard responded, scoring 16 of her game-high 29 points over the next 14:17 to lead Ansbach to a 60-56 victory and the 2005 Army-Europe women's basketball championship.

No sweat, right? "We've been behind before," said Ansbach's Christine Cuttino, who scored 11 points, six of them off assists from Howard during Ansbach's decisive run to the gun.

"My teammates are scrappy. We always pull together," Cuttino's final field goal of the game, off a feed from Howard with four minutes to play, cut Ansbach's deficit to 52-50. But it took a three-pointer by Howard with 48 seconds left in the game to finally put Ansbach ahead for good and make for a triumphant return to the hardwood for Howard, who played briefly for Heidelberg a couple of seasons ago.

"I'm really glad to be back," Howard said. "I tore my ACL at Heidelberg, and then I had my baby. I stopped playing for a year, but then I decided it was time to come back."

Howard's timing couldn't have been less opportune for Kitzingen, which got 15 points, on 5-for-5 shooting from behind the three-point arc from Katrina Parker. All Parker's shots, however, came in the first half. She did not get a shot off in the second half as Kitzingen's 36-24 halftime lead dwindled away.

"They came out to cover me," Parker said.

"We had to go inside." Inside was productive enough, with 16 points from Katie Wahlman and 12 from Bertha Kabuye. But turnovers defanged the Lady

Under pressure from Ansbach's Howard, Cuttino and Libby Hall, Kitzingen endured no fewer than 19 turnovers in the final 20 minutes.

Both teams qualified for the Army-Air Force Final Four, March 31-April 3 in Bamberg.

Heidelberg men win Army-Europe thriller

BY RUSTY BRYAN
Stars and Stripes

WÜRZBURG, Germany — Andre Barnes and Al Elliott each hit free throws in the final six seconds Sunday to give the Heidelberg Generals their third straight Army-Europe basketball championship with a 73-71 victory over the Kaiserslautern Panthers.

But two Army-Europe basketball veterans who were determined not to let their teams lose, Kaiserslautern's Vincent Williams and Heidelberg's Craig Marcelin, packed a couple of decades of excitement into the final moments of this showdown.

Only Marcelin was successful. He scored 13 points, six of them in the final 10 minutes. But he made his most valuable contribution in the last two minutes.

With his team's 12-point halftime lead down to three points in the final 3:32, Marcelin dashed across the floor to make successive rebounds of missed Heidelberg shots to buy his team three possessions that consumed more than 90 seconds.

"It's all about being hungry for victory," said Marcelin, a multiple veteran of All-Amy and Armed Forces teams. "You've gotta leave it all on the floor."

Williams, who's been a mainstay of European basketball since 1992, led as much on the floor as Marcelin, who might have had a bigger appetite for victory.

Williams scored 34 points, including four second-half three-pointers that tied the game at 71 with 10 seconds to play.

His heroics were undone, however, when K-town's Alvin Johnson fouled Barnes as the Generals were setting up for a game-winning shot with 6.6 seconds left. Barnes, who came off the bench to score 11 points, made his first free throw, but bounced the second off the rim to give Ktown apparent life.

Heidelberg's Terrance Flemmons, however, darted across the lane to grab another big offensive rebound for Heidelberg. Flemmons, falling to the floor, got the ball to Elliott, who was fouled with 2.7 seconds left. It was Flemmons' 13th rebound of the contest and his fourth offensive rebound of the final 10 minutes. Flemmons also led Heidelberg in scoring with 19 points.

"We had to battle," said Heidelberg's Kenyatta Mack, of Heidelberg's decisive rebounding effort. "They were all over the place. They were sending five men to the glass on every shot. At halftime, I told Flemmons that if we didn't get buy they were going to run over us."

Elliott, who scored 18 points, missed his first shot, but sank the second, and then ended K-town's shot by leaping high to intercept a pass. His effort denied Williams a chance at yet another miracle.

"He's a great player," Barnes said of Williams. "He did everything for his team that he could do."

And then some. Williams scored 31 of his team's final 41 points, including consecutive treys in the final 40 seconds that forged the 71-71 tie.

W. Va. guard scores
19 of his 29 in OTs
as Mountaineers
oust Wake Forest

BY JOE KAY
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Former local prep star Mike Gansey spent his summer shooting baskets on Cleveland State's cozy court, picturing himself making a big shot in an NCAA tournament game.

Remarkably, he got the chance on the same court, and made the shot. Then another, and another.

Shooting at those familiar baskets, the junior guard scored a career-high 29 points — 19 of them in the two overtimes — and the Mountaineers sent No. 2 seed Wake Forest to another stunning second-round loss, 111-105 on Saturday night.

West Virginia (23-10) will play Texas Tech next in the Albuquerque Regional, its deepest tournament run since it made the round of 16 in 1998. The Mountaineers have beaten seven Top 25 teams this season, a school record.

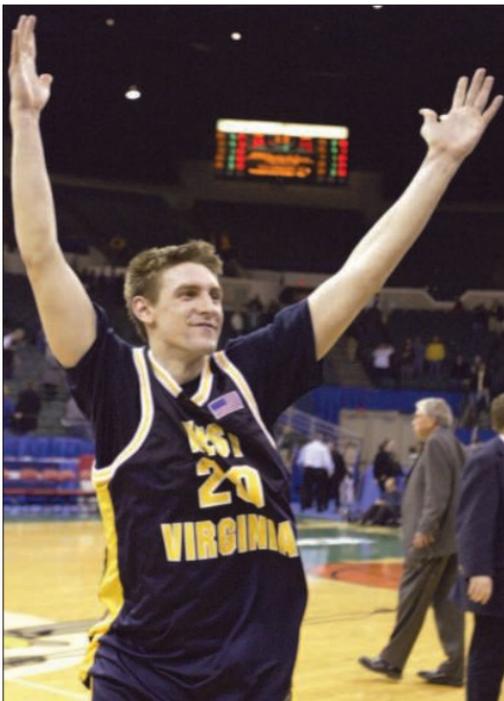

The crowd at Cleveland State rooted Wisconsin-Milwaukee to an upset of Boston College in the first game, then revelled as Wake Forest (27-6) became the first ACC team knocked out of the tournament.

"This is just a dream come true," said Gansey, who went to a suburban high school and worked out this summer in Wolstein Center with his brother, Steve, a guard at Cleveland State. "It's an unbelievable feeling."

For Wake Forest as well. After one of its most promising seasons ended with another overtime loss — the Demon Deacons were 0-3 in OT this season — the players couldn't comprehend what had just happened.

"It was what? Three OTs? Two OTs? It was just a long game," said guard Chris Paul, who fouled out with 3:24 left in the second OT. "We got a little fatigued at the end, and Gansey kept making play after play after play."

High expectations accompanied the Demon Deacons, who also lost in the second round as a No. 2 seed in 2003. They returned every scholarship player from last season, were ranked No. 1 in the country for two weeks and set a school record for wins in the NCAA opener.

West Virginia's Mike Gansey waves as he leaves the court after the Mountaineers' 111-105 double-overtime victory over Wake Forest in the second round of the NCAA tournament Saturday in Cleveland. Gansey, who was a Cleveland-area prep standout, led West Virginia with 29 points.
